Airmen Sink Four Jap Destroyers At Biak

NIPS FAIL IN ATTEMPT TO AID ISLAND FORCES

Fifth Ship Damaged And Two Others Put To Flight By Allied Planes

FLEET CAUGHT NAPPING

MacArthur Reveals New Strikes At Truk, Wewak And Bougainville

GEN. DOUGLAS MACARTHUR'S HEADQUARTERS IN NEW GUINEA, June 10 — A Jap attempt to reinforce threatened airdrome garrisons on Biak island, off the northwest coast of Dutch New Guinea, was frustrated today by Allied airmen who smashed a squadron of seven Japanese warships, sinking four destroyers and damaging a fifth.

A sixth destroyer and a cruiser in the enemy task force fled under the shattering assault by American Mitchell bombers which blasted the enemy vessels from masthead height with 1,000-pound bombs.

Escorting Allied fighter planes drove off 10 Japanese fighters while the Mitchells dove down on the ships through a curtain of anti-aircraft fire.

The Jap cruiser and destroyers were caught steaming west in Geelvink bay in the Schouten island area.

Quick Victory

The Mitchell attack blasted the four destroyers to the bottom in short order, and cleared the way for an attack on the fifth. Several direct hits by 1,000 pound bombs damaged the destroyer severely as five of the ten Jap planes striving to cover the battered warships were shot down by American fighters. A sixth enemy plane was probably destroyed. Three American planes from the group of ten Mitchells and escorting fighters failed to return.

Action on Biak island saw Mokmer airdrome firmly in American hands with jungle trained veteran troops of the Sixth Army continuing to mop up enemy positions in hills and caves northeast and northwest of the captured airdrome.

American veteran fighters prepared a drive on Boroke and Sorido airdromes. Capture of the airdromes on the main island in the Schouten group will place American airpower within 880 miles of Jap bases in the southern Philippines.

VICHY CALLS MILITIAMEN IN LYON DISTRICT

NEW YORK, June 10 — An "urgent request" to all Vichy militiamen in the Lyon region to report to their headquarters was broadcast today by the Nazi-controlled Vichy home radio which interrupted its schedule to make the appeal.

U. S. government monitors recorded the broadcast. The Lyon area has been an active center of resistance by French patriots.

De Gaulle Stirs More Displeasure

Forthcoming Visit To U. S. Not To Gain Recognition For Committee

WASHINGTON, June 10—Officials made it emphatically clear today that Gen. De Gaulle's forthcoming visit to Washington will not result in full recognition of the French national committee, nor in any further agreement for De Gaulle's control of civilian affairs in France.

In fact, there was evidence of President Roosevelt's increasing displeasure with De Gaulle, in spite of the fact that he has consented to receive him at the White House.

It was clearly not an invitation. The President has consistently refused to invite De Gaulle to Washington, and he took pains to make it clear that the initiative in this case came from the French general.

Officials cited three recent incidents which have increased the strain between Washington and Algiers:

1. Last month, in a Brazzaville radio address celebrating the anniversary of the liberation of Tunisia, De Gaulle declared that this had been accomplished by "French forces, assisted by British and American troops."

2. On Tuesday of this week (D-day), De Gaulle made a broadcast from London to the people of France, in which he avoided the obvious opportunity to pay tribute to the great British and American investment of men and materials in the liberation.

In the same speech, he called (Continued on Page Two)

STRIKE AT HUNS, ITALIANS TOLD

Allied Airplanes Dropping Arms And Ammunition To Patriots

NEW YORK, June 10—Italian patriots in the Nazi-held northern section of Italy were urged by Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander today to strike immediately at the retreating Germans, the British radio reported.

The Allied commander, pointing out that "our planes are dropping you arms and ammunition and you will be equipped for the battle," told the Italians bluntly that "the moment has come to intensify your efforts."

"Present conditions," he said, "offer you the best chances to carry out the missions you have been given. Do everything you possibly can to prevent the enemy from retreating."

The British announcer reported also that Italian underground workers near Frosinone blew up two German ammunition dumps and destroyed 87 badly-needed vehicles.

"Another group of patriots who were unarmed took 28 German prisoners and turned them over to the Allies," he concluded.

$300 ALIMONY PAID, BUT ALL IN SMALL COINS

CHICAGO, June 10 — Elwood M. Davis, owner of an oil business, paid his $300 alimony installment on time, but it wasn't the promptness which his wife's lawyer will remember. It was the method of payment.

Just as Attorney Sol M. Friedman asked Judge Julius H. Miner in circuit court to cite Davis for contempt for failure to pay the final installment on a $1,000 alimony settlement, two guards entered the courtroom carrying a sack addressed to the attorney.

In the sack were the $300—in pennies, nickels and other coins. It weighed 145 pounds. Friedman sent it to a bank to be counted.

Defenses Demanded By Hitler Never Built On French Invasion Coast

WITH UNITED STATES FORCES IN FRANCE, June 8—(Delayed)—This is part of the story—from American intelligence officers and from first-hand observation—of what was wrong with Adolf Hitler's Atlantic wall and why Allied forces bent on liberation of France and all Europe crashed through it.

Without any intention or desire to detract from the limitless heroism of American, British and Canadian troops who went through indescribable hell at the savagely defended beaches, the indisputable fact remains that at many places on the Norman coast of France, the fortifications demanded by Adolf Hitler were not built.

The mine-fields were not laid. Batteries of coastal guns were in reality huge tree trunks felled and tilted at an imposing angle.

Today, huge blue-jailed Frenchmen in sabots are carting these "guns" away to use as fuel. Never have Frenchmen enjoyed anything so much as taking these "cannon" apart and hacking them up, to cook food in their farmhouse fireplaces.

Before each wooden "Big Bertha" was disassembled, the French insisted on going through an endless pantomime of "loading and firing" them.

When Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel visited this section of German coastal defenses on the southeastern corner of the Cherbourg peninsula three months ago, he gazed with unconcealed satisfaction at hundreds of death's-heads. (Continued on Page Two)

WOMAN "HELL CAT" TEST PILOT TAKES TO SILK

NORWALK, Conn., June 10—Elizabeth Hooker, one of three women "Hell Cat" test pilots employed by Grumman aircraft returned to work today putting the fast navy fighter planes through their initial flights undisturbed over her first near tragedy in fifteen years of flying.

Miss Hooker was forced to bail out yesterday when the "Hell Cat" fighter plane she was testing caught fire. Company officials said the accident was the first experienced by any of the three woman test pilots they employ.

HUNS KILL COMMANDER, SURRENDER TO ALLIES

NEW YORK, June 10—The London radio revealed today that a force of 60 Germans on the west wall shot their commander and gave up after he refused to surrender.

The London broadcast attributed the report to an American rear admiral commanding an amphibious assault force.

The broadcast added that some Nazi prisoners claimed that their officers deserted them soon after the Allies landed.

SENATE ACTION STIRS IRE OF ADMINISTRATION

Fight Planned In House To Balk Amendments To Price Control Act

INFLATIONARY, SAYS OPA

Changes Condemned By Both President Roosevelt And Chester Bowles

WASHINGTON, June 10—Administration leaders today planned a battle in the house to reverse senate action in approving amendments to the price control act which are branded inflationary by OPA.

The senate passed a bill last night extending the law for 18 months, to December 31, 1945. But it added amendments condemned both by President Roosevelt and OPA Administrator Chester Bowles.

The administration has two chances to secure enactment of legislation satisfactory to it. One is in house reversal of senate action. The other is reversal in a joint senate-house conference.

The major senate amendment was proposed by Sen. Bankhead (D) Ala., and adopted 39 to 35. It requires OPA to adjust cotton textile price ceilings so as to bring about payment of the parity price to farmers for raw cotton.

Hit By Bowles Assailed by Bowles as costing consumers 250 million dollars a year, it was vigorously defended by its backers on the ground that it brings justice to the cotton farmer and will increase textile production so consumers will be able to buy low-cost goods.

"I feel that the amendment materially weakens the price control act," said Sen. Wagner (D) N. Y., chairman of the senate banking committee.

"If my amendment becomes law and is faithfully administered everyone in the senate will be glad," said Bankhead, its sponsor. "You will get low-priced cotton textiles which you can't buy now, and you will keep prices down. Of course, it isn't inflationary."

NEW WAR CHILD EVOLVED OUT OF WORLD STRIFE

NEW YORK, June 10—After eight years of the wailing of air raid sirens, the roar of guns and bursting of bombs, a new child has been evolved in Europe, Mrs. Edna Blue, executive chairman of the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children said today.

A composite picture of this new child would find one who expects air raids at a certain time each day, and if the raid does not come, suffers from nervousness almost as much as though planes had dropped the anticipated bombs.

The child isn't bothered by having to live underground, even for days at a time, and squints when he sees daylight. He has no idea there are places where lights gleam from windows at night and people go their ways without blackouts.

The new child has never seen an orange, and considers a fresh egg a great treat.

This picture of the pitiful little victims of war was gleaned from reports of the Foster Parents' Plan staff members and psychologists. Since the plan established its first children's colony in Spain, in 1936, more than 20,000 case histories have been studied of Polish, Maltese, French, Belgian, Czech, Dutch, Spanish, British, Norwegian, Hungarian, Danish and German children.

"One conclusion has been established from all of these histories," declared Mrs. Blue. "The most important loss to a child is separation from his mother."

Last Ditch Stand At Cherbourg Expected To Be Ordered By Hitler

WASHINGTON, June 10—Military sources predicted today that the German high command will order a "last ditch" stand at Cherbourg before surrendering the city to Allied forces now threatening it.

Repeated emphasis was placed on the need for the harbor facilities to speed up the progress of the invasion of the European continent.

One competent observer, commenting on the proportionately heavy loss of equipment while attempting to land on invasion beaches in bad weather, declared:

"If they can run the ships into Cherbourg and unload on docks, it doesn't make any difference what the weather is."

Cherbourg, capable of receiving up to 8,000 tons of freight daily in peacetime, is also the scene of naval installations, although it was not considered a major French naval base prior to the war.

Stand Expected

Military experts insisted that the cutting of the major road from France proper to Cherbourg—an announced accomplishment of the Allied invasion forces—did not presuppose that the enemy would evacuate the city as the Germans have hinted.

On the contrary, the strategic value of Cherbourg to the Allied invasion plan was considered so paramount that it is anticipated that "anything the Germans have in place would continue to fight, and to hold the Allies out of the city as long as possible." If the Germans can thus delay Allied occupation for "four or five days," it was said, the German general staff would consider the operation well worth while.

Weather Aids Huns

Meanwhile, the German ability to mass troops in the invasion peninsula is being hampered by their necessity to maintain segments of their armies all along the occupied coastline from Spain to Norway. Gen. Eisenhower has committed only a small portion of his available strength in the fighting thus far, and the Nazis undoubtedly have been alerted along the entire European perimeter facing the British isles, in anticipation of the possibility of other major landings.

Through the first four days of fighting, according to military observers, the weather has been unfavorable for the Allies—particularly in hampering air operations.

Despite the overcasts and rain squalls, however, which have permitted the Nazis to mass troops with less-than-anticipated observation by the Allies, the over-all progress of the invasion is considered "satisfactory."

"Nothing of any unexpected or sensational nature has taken place," one observer told reporters. "There is no decisive thing one can point to on one side or the other."

New and drastic German orders against the movement of Frenchmen in their own country were interpreted as a heartening sign that the Nazis may be beginning to feel the effects of the underground. It is believed that Nazi security officers in France are now engaged in a tremendous amount of security policing. It was stated that the Allies had good grounds for their "hope for very widespread underground activity."

MINE DETECTORS USED TO FIND NAZI SNIPERS

ON THE BEACH OF NORMANDY, June 8—(Delayed)—Snipers, who have been one of the deadliest obstacles facing Americans all along this central sector of the front, have concealed themselves so effectively that at least one unit of the First Division resorted to the use of mine detectors to find them.

The detectors were particularly effective against Germans hidden in small dugouts entered by small sod-covered trap doors. The Germans made a practice of leaving the door shut until the Americans passed, then putting it up and taking a shot or two before popping back.

These dugouts were so ingeniously built that it often was impossible to see them even when standing nearby, but the mine detectors registered metal underground.

Uninvited Guest

PFC. CHARLES E. SCHMELZE, 20, of Pittsburgh, Pa., napped at wrong time and, awakening, found himself in the middle of the Allied invasion of France. Assisting in servicing troop-carrying gliders for invasion, Schmelze crawled into the tail of one of them on which he had been working and proceeded to take a little "shut-eye." He was still asleep when the glider, loaded with troops, took off. (International)

BROADER FIGHT PAY BILL URGED

Chandler Favors Increase For All Soldiers At Grips With Enemy

WASHINGTON, June 10—With special combat pay for America's doughboys apparently assured, an attempt was under way today in congress to broaden pending legislation to include other army groups.

"The boys who wield the grenades and bayonets deserve the raise," said Sen. Chandler (D) Ky., "but so do the boys in the tanks and elsewhere who are at grips with the enemy, for their danger is just as real."

Chandler expressed doubt, that senate action could be expected before congress recesses for the Republican and Democratic national conventions. Similar legislation is pending in the house, but is still in committee.

There appeared to be no opposition to combat pay legislation. The Senate Military Affairs committee unanimously reported favorably to the senate a measure increasing by $10 a month the pay of infantrymen who engage in (Continued on Page Two)

CHICAGO, June 10—Four-year-old Raymond Davis, Jr., was alive today because a clothesline broke his three story fall from his apartment home.

Raymond climbed to the railing of the apartment's back porch and lost his balance. At the hospital, attaches said he suffered only a bruise on his head.

FIERCE BATTLES RAGING ALONG ENTIRE FRONT

Heavy German Infantry And Tank Assaults Directed At British, Canadians

BOMBERS BLAST BERLIN

Allied Advance Continues At Rapid Pace Across Italian Peninsula

By International News Service American veterans, spearheading the Allied attack across the Cherbourg peninsula in a drive to isolate the great French port, seized the town of Isigny today in a drive 11 miles southeast of American held Ste. Mere-Eglise.

Capture of Isigny, on the coastal road between Carentan and captured Bayeux extended the Allied invasion front over a 32-mile sector from Isigny southeast to Caen.

Fierce fighting raged along all battlefronts in Normandy with heavy German tank and infantry assaults directed at British and Canadian units near Caen.

Strong contact with German forces was reported also in the region of Conde-Sur-Seuilles, south-east of Bayeux.

Allied aircraft, flying through the remnants of bad weather which reduced yesterday's aerial activity to patrols over the immediate battle area, smashed at German communications immediately to the rear of the battle area.

British bombers in a night attack landed at airfields at Fiers, Rennes, Le Mans and Laval. Other bombers disrupted Nazi rail traffic to the north, south, east and west in a raid on the rail center of Etampes.

Other light bombers attacked communications immediately behind the fighting lines, and RAF mosquito bombers, in a night raid, hit Berlin in a block-buster attack, the first on the Nazi capital since the invasion.

American fortresses and Liberators pressed the concentrated Allied campaign to knock out German airfields from which Nazi planes might menace the Normandy beachheads.

The American heavies blasted airdromes in several sections of Normandy and Brittany and lashed at German defenses and gun positions on the north coast of France.

American Marauder and Havoc bombers continued the assaults on German forces in the battle area.

Yank Offensive With the Allied air campaign growing in intensity, the German radio announced that American forces in the Carentan area had launched an offensive both to the east and west, with four infantry divisions and one tank division participating in the two-way drive.

Another German broadcast admitted that American forces north of Carentan have made progress in their attacks and that one American armored division has moved northwest toward Cherbourg.

Three new tank landings on the French coast, each landing consisting of 100 tanks and 1,000 men, have been reported by the German radio.

COLUMBUS GIRL BRIDE-TO-BE OF DON S. GENTILE

COLUMBUS, June 10—Isabelle Masdea, 20-year-old bride-to-be of Capt. Don S. Gentile of Piqua, one of America's top-ranking air aces in the European war theatre, today announced that the forthcoming wedding probably would take place in Columbus.

Miss Masdea revealed that she would probably wear white but said the date for the ceremony would not be set "until Don gets his orders."

Declaring she is "very excited and thrilled," the pretty childhood playmate of the Mustang pilot, said Don had given her the "ring" Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Cipriano, his aunt and uncle, in Columbus.

The orders which will determine the date of the wedding are expected any day by Gentile, his fiancée said.

NEW YORK, June 10—The London radio revealed today that a force of 60 Germans on the west wall shot their commander and gave up after he refused to surrender.

YANK INVADERS BIT DAZED, BUT KEEP ON GOING

ON THE BEACH OF NORMANDY, June 8—(Delayed)—The men who drove ashore two days ago in this area under a deadly fire still are a bit dazed today, but not enough to keep them from getting on with the job at hand.

One or two landing-craft infantry vessels bringing in a naval beach battalion struck a mine 100 yards or more off shore and the blast killed 30 men in number 1 hold.

"That was just the beginning," said Lieut. Alvin P. Carpenter of Sunbury, Pa. "Mortars, rocket shells, artillery fire and machine guns really began opening up then."

The most charged life in this unit seemed to belong to a physician, Lieut. Paul Koren of Scarsdale, N. Y. As the men were scrambling from the ship in four or five feet of water to seek shelter ashore, a mortar shell burst inches from the doctor, killing a man on his right, one on his left and two immediately behind, but leaving him unscathed.

During the next trying hours while most of the men were pinned close into foxholes he had to keep moving around to tend the wounded and was constantly exposed, but was not hit. One time he was carrying a wounded man on his back when a shell killed the patient.

Lieut. Sam Byrd, who played the young ball-bouncing "Dude" Lester for more than three years in the New York production of "Tobacco Road," also is in this outfit and has escaped thus far from nothing worse than skinned knuckles. Sam, who is from Mount Olive, N. C., had the job of directing traffic into the beaches.

SENATE ACTION STIRS IRE OF ADMINISTRATION

Fight Planned In House To Balk Amendments To Price Control Act

INFLATIONARY, SAYS OPA

Changes Condemned By Both President Roosevelt And Chester Bowles

WASHINGTON, June 10—Administration leaders today planned a battle in the house to reverse senate action in approving amendments to the price control act which are branded inflationary by OPA.

The senate passed a bill last night extending the law for 18 months, to December 31, 1945. But it added amendments condemned both by President Roosevelt and OPA Administrator Chester Bowles.

The administration has two chances to secure enactment of legislation satisfactory to it. One is in house reversal of senate action. The other is reversal in a joint senate-house conference.

The major senate amendment was proposed by Sen. Bankhead (D) Ala., and adopted 39 to 35. It requires OPA to adjust cotton textile price ceilings so as to bring about payment of the parity price to farmers for raw cotton.

Assailed by Bowles as costing consumers 250 million dollars a year, it was vigorously defended by its backers on the ground that it brings justice to the cotton farmer and will increase textile production so consumers will be able to buy low-cost goods.

"I feel that the amendment materially weakens the price control act," said Sen. Wagner (D) N. Y., chairman of the senate banking committee.

"If my amendment becomes law and is faithfully administered everyone in the senate will be glad," said Bankhead, its sponsor. "You will get low-priced cotton textiles which you can't buy now, and you will keep prices down. Of course, it isn't inflationary."

NEW WAR CHILD EVOLVED OUT OF WORLD STRIFE

NEW YORK, June 10—After eight years of the wailing of air raid sirens, the roar of guns and bursting of bombs, a new child has been evolved in Europe, Mrs. Edna Blue, executive chairman of the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children said today.

A composite picture of this new child would find one who expects air raids at a certain time each day, and if the raid does not come, suffers from nervousness almost as much as though planes had dropped the anticipated bombs.

The child isn't bothered by having to live underground, even for days at a time, and squints when he sees daylight. He has no idea there are places where lights gleam from windows at night and people go their ways without blackouts.

The new child has never seen an orange, and considers a fresh egg a great treat.

This picture of the pitiful little victims of war was gleaned from reports of the Foster Parents' Plan staff members and psychologists. Since the plan established its first children's colony in Spain, in 1936, more than 20,000 case histories have been studied of Polish, Maltese, French, Belgian, Czech, Dutch, Spanish, British, Norwegian, Hungarian, Danish and German children.

"One conclusion has been established from all of these histories," declared Mrs. Blue. "The most important loss to a child is separation from his mother."

Last Ditch Stand At Cherbourg Expected To Be Ordered By Hitler

"Nothing of any unexpected or sensational nature has taken place," one observer told reporters. "There is no decisive thing one can point to on one side or the other."

New and drastic German orders against the movement of Frenchmen in their own country were interpreted as a heartening sign that the Nazis may be beginning to feel the effects of the underground. It is believed that Nazi security officers in France are now engaged in a tremendous amount of security policing. It was stated that the Allies had good grounds for their "hope for very widespread underground activity."

MINE DETECTORS USED TO FIND NAZI SNIPERS

ON THE BEACH OF NORMANDY, June 8—(Delayed)—

Snipers, who have been one of the deadliest obstacles facing Americans all along this central sector of the front, have concealed themselves so effectively that at least one unit of the First Division resorted to the use of mine detectors to find them.

The detectors were particularly effective against Germans hidden in small dugouts entered by small sod-covered trap doors. The Germans made a practice of leaving the door shut until the Americans passed, then putting it up and taking a shot or two before popping back.

These dugouts were so ingeniously built that it often was impossible to see them even when standing nearby, but the mine detectors registered metal underground.

Uninvited Guest

PFC. CHARLES E. SCHMELZE, 20, of Pittsburgh, Pa., napped at wrong time and, awakening, found himself in the middle of the Allied invasion of France. Assisting in servicing troop-carrying gliders for invasion, Schmelze crawled into the tail of one of them on which he had been working and proceeded to take a little "shut-eye." He was still asleep when the glider, loaded with troops, took off. (International)

Chandler Favors Increase For All Soldiers At Grips With Enemy

WASHINGTON, June 10—With special combat pay for America's doughboys apparently assured, an attempt was under way today in congress to broaden pending legislation to include other army groups.

"The boys who wield the grenades and bayonets deserve the raise," said Sen. Chandler (D) Ky., "but so do the boys in the tanks and elsewhere who are at grips with the enemy, for their danger is just as real."

Chandler expressed doubt, that senate action could be expected before congress recesses for the Republican and Democratic national conventions. Similar legislation is pending in the house, but is still in committee.

There appeared to be no opposition to combat pay legislation. The Senate Military Affairs committee unanimously reported favorably to the senate a measure increasing by $10 a month the pay of infantrymen who engage in (Continued on Page Two)

BOY, 4, FALLS THREE STORIES; SAVED BY LINE

CHICAGO, June 10—Four-year-old Raymond Davis, Jr., was alive today because a clothesline broke his three story fall from his apartment home.

Raymond climbed to the railing of the apartment's back porch and lost his balance. At the hospital, attaches said he suffered only a bruise on his head.

FIERCE BATTLES RAGING ALONG ENTIRE FRONT

Heavy German Infantry And Tank Assaults Directed At British, Canadians

BOMBERS BLAST BERLIN

Allied Advance Continues At Rapid Pace Across Italian Peninsula

By International News Service
American veterans, spearheading the Allied attack across the Cherbourg peninsula in a drive to isolate the great French port, seized the town of Isigny today in a drive 11 miles southeast of American held Ste. Mere-Eglise.

Capture of Isigny, on the coastal road between Carentan and captured Bayeux extended the Allied invasion front over a 32-mile sector from Isigny southeast to Caen. Fierce fighting raged along all battlefronts in Normandy with heavy German tank and infantry assaults directed at British and Canadian units near Caen.

Strong contact with German forces was reported also in the region of Conde-Sur-Seuilles, southeast of Bayeux.

Allied aircraft, flying through the remnants of bad weather which reduced yesterday's aerial activity to patrols over the immediate battle area, smashed at German communications immediately to the rear of the battle area.

Bombers Active

British bombers in a night attack landed at airfields at Fiers, Rennes, Le Mans and Laval. Other bombers disrupted Nazi rail traffic to the north, south, east and west in a raid on the rail center of Etampes.

Other light bombers attacked communications immediately behind the fighting lines, and RAF mosquito bombers, in a night raid, hit Berlin in a block-buster attack, the first on the Nazi capital since the invasion.

American fortresses and Liberators pressed the concentrated Allied campaign to knock out German airfields from which Nazi planes might menace the Normandy beachheads.

The American heavies blasted airdromes in several sections of Normandy and Brittany and lashed at German defenses and gun positions on the north coast of France.

American Marauder and Havoc bombers continued the assaults on German forces in the battle area.

Yank Offensive

With the Allied air campaign growing in intensity, the German radio announced that American forces in the Carentan area had launched an offensive both to the east and west, with four infantry divisions and one tank division participating in the two-way drive.

Another German broadcast admitted that American forces north of Carentan have made progress in their attacks and that one American armored division has moved northwest toward Cherbourg.

Three new tank landings on the French coast, each landing consisting of 100 tanks and 1,000 men, have been reported by the German radio.

COLUMBUS GIRL BRIDE-TO-BE OF DON S. GENTILE

COLUMBUS, June 10—Isabelle Masdea, 20-year-old bride-to-be of Capt. Don S. Gentile of Piqua, one of America's top-ranking air aces in the European war theatre, today announced that the forthcoming wedding probably would take place in Columbus.

Miss Masdea revealed that she would probably wear white but said the date for the ceremony would not be set "until Don gets his orders."

Declaring she is "very excited and thrilled," the pretty childhood playmate of the Mustang pilot, said Don had given her the "ring" Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank J. Cipriano, his aunt and uncle, in Columbus.

The orders which will determine the date of the wedding are expected any day by Gentile, his fiancée said.

The senate adopted the Wiley amendment permitting employers to increase salaries of "white collar" workers up to $37.50 a week without War Labor Board approval, but it may be knocked out in conference. The Thomas amendment to require an increase in oil prices was rejected.

The house, which is debating its own price control extension bill, appeared more disposed than the senate to stick to the administration line.

A barrage of liberalizing amendments, however, were to be offered today. Sponsors hoped that the senate attitude would result in the house adopting a more liberal attitude.

The house had agreed to an amendment designed to stabilize the price of fish and another permitting increases in rents to meet rise in taxes and other extraordinary expenses.

But it had rejected the Smith amendments, which opponents said would wreck OPA administration. Administration leaders were hopeful the house would reject a companion to the Bankhead cotton "escalator" amendment. This would pave the way for knocking out the Bankhead amendment in conference.

Many administration spokesmen freely predicted that Mr. Roosevelt will veto a bill if it seriously modifies the price control law.

Baby Flat Tops Take Convoys Through

Small Aircraft Carriers Check German Submarines

SMALL BUT MIGHTY—Two baby flat tops of the British Royal Navy, with planes on their flight decks, are seen from deck of HMS Victorious.

By EDWARD MISURELL

Central Press Correspondent

WHEN a British naval force protecting a Russia-bound convoy recently dealt a smashing blow to a German wolf-pack off Norway, the major part in the victory was played by a baby flat top constructed in an American shipyard.

Wildcat fighter planes and Swordfish fighter-bombers, flying through sub-zero Arctic gales after taking off from the escort carrier in pitching, murderous seas, sighted the U-boats, sank two of them, probably sank two others and damaged several more.

In addition, the planes, flying in weather so freezing that ice had to be chipped from the small aircraft carrier's flight deck before they could take off, fought away swarms of German aircraft that relentlessly harried the convoy from land bases.

Despite the series of concentrated, almost continuous, attacks, the convoy reached Russia without the loss of a single merchant vessel. More than 250,000 tons of tanks, guns, planes and food arrived safely ready for use against the enemy on the long Russian fighting front.

The successful outcome of the encounters is added proof that the tide in the war at sea has definitely turned to the favor of the Allies.

Although there are still considerable numbers of German submarines lurking in the north, middle, and even the south Atlantic, their activities have been neutralized by tactical, technical and quantitative advantages established by the Allies.

Long-range land-based bombers flying in wide-arc patrols over the ocean, the development and effective employment of radar, and particularly the use in increasing numbers of baby flat tops built in America, has broken the U-boat blockade that once threatened to strangle the United Nations.

Used in Varied Ways

The small, auxiliary carriers are used in varied ways. Some steam along with the many convoys crossing the Atlantic protecting the merchant and troop ships against sea attacks.

Others attached to destroyer units form hunter or killer groups, patrolling the sea lanes and seeking out and blasting U-boats, while a number of these vessels are used to ferry aircraft to Britain and Africa.

In this latter role, the baby flat tops have a larger aircraft capacity than any cargo ship or tanker. Scores of Mustangs, Hellcats, Avengers, Thunderbolts and Vengeances can be lashed to flight decks and quickly transported close to varied fighting fronts for immediate use against the enemy.

Most of the escort carriers sailing the seas today are really mass-produced. They are constructed with a modified merchant vessel hull and have conventional propelling machinery.

They differ in that hangar and flight decks, the island superstructure and the special equipment of an aircraft carrier replaces the usual cargo vessel holds, decks and bridge structure.

With the exception of the first vessels of this class—which were needed in a hurry—the present small carriers are not converted from merchant ships. They are built from the keel up of standardized design and have been found to be more satisfactory than their earlier prototypes.

Of course the baby flat tops operate far fewer planes than a conventional battle carrier, but they possess in smaller proportion the same fighting equipment.

They are crammed with anti-aircraft guns with 40-mm. Bofors and 20-mm. Oerlikons predominating, and they have the latest plotting, detection, radio and fire-fighting equipment available.

Their speed is moderate but more than adequate for the duties that are expected of this type vessel. Although they lack the defensive strength in armor, guns or planes of the larger carriers, they make up for this quantitative loss in spirit.

The pilots who fly the planes and the crews that man the vessels have learned a lot and make good use of this experience while conveying hundreds of thousands of tons of supplies across the Atlantic.

Real Combat Value

Many of the flyers have become so expert at their jobs after numerous patrols that they can take off from the comparatively short flight deck of a baby flat top even when the ship is rising and falling as much as 50 feet in an ocean swell.

The chief task of the escort carriers, at least in the Atlantic, is commerce protection and U-boat killing, but they have demonstrated at Salerno and in the Gilberts and Marshalls that they possess a combat value of increasing importance.

Equipped mainly with fighters and fighter-bombers, as assault carriers they can give powerful support in numbers for an amphibious operation.

In spite of early skepticism on the part of a number of military and naval men, the baby flat top has proved its value in action as an excellent fighting unit.

As more and more of the ships are commissioned and take their places in convoy-protecting and task forces, the men who man these vessels now are certain they will be heard from in increasing measure.

U. S. DESTROYER FIRST SUNK IN INVASION FIGHT

SUPREME HEADQUARTERS ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, FRIDAY NIGHT, June 9 —(Delayed)—The first destroyer lost in the invasion of Normandy was an American ship.

The United States warship opened the bombardment twenty minutes before the set time when one of its companion destroyers, going close in shore, was fired on by German batteries.

The story of the sinking was told tonight by an officer from the vessel.

He himself was saved although he remained on the bridge until the last, directing operations, and only left when the main deck was three feet below the water.

The crew after taking to boats was shelled, as were those survivors swimming in the water.

The tides made it difficult to leave the area of the shipwreck and this officer himself, after swimming for an hour, was still 100 yards away from the vessel with the danger ever present of another hit being registered by the German batteries on a vital spot in the ship which might have exploded her.

No time could be spared for rescue work while the battle was going on to cover the initial landings on shore, but finally other American destroyers came to the spot and one, firing from one side of the ship, spread its nets on the other and picked up men from the water.

ed that German officials have ordered all French banks in the Atlantic coast area to evacuate their funds to the interior.

The eastern front, where the Soviet high command reported action in pre-war Poland, near Tarnopol, and north of Lasi, flared to the north as a Finnish communiqué reported that Russian forces had launched a large scale attack, supported by heavy artillery batteries and strong tank formations, on the Karelian isthmus.

Mediterranean air force planes cooperating with the ground advance in Italy swept northward to strike the oil refineries at Trieste, and blasted German road communications immediately ahead of the advancing troops.

Fighter bombers destroyed 300 railroad cars in attacks on rail communications and destroyed or damaged 396 motor vehicles in assaults on Nazi road escape routes.

combat with the enemy. Foot soldiers training for combat, to be designated "expert infantrymen," would receive $5 a month extra.

Chandler, a member of the Senate Military Affairs committee, said the measure should be broadened, however. As reported out by the committee, it held the backing of Secretary of War Stimson.

Chandler indicated that in attempting to amend the bill on the floor of the senate he would try to include within its provisions the members of such units as the nurses corps, medical orderlies and others who come under fire, as well as tank men.

Another attempt may also be made by Sen. Tobey (R) N. H., to boost the amount of combat pay over existing rates by 50 percent. Tobey's bill was rejected by the committee, which instead endorsed the measure introduced by Sen. Reynolds (D) N. C., committee chairman.

"I think the legislation should be amended to provide for more combat pay and should cover all branches of service not covered by existing higher pay provisions, not just those of the infantry," said Tobey.

Tobey pointed out that men in the air corps, submarine service and paratroopers receive an additional 50 percent pay for combat duty.

In asking that the Stimson-endorsed measure be approved by the committee, Maj. Gen. Miller White, assistant chief of staff for personnel, asserted:

"There's nothing that compares to what the infantryman in actual combat undergoes. If you don't put the doughboy on the ground, you haven't got anything."

head signs reading "achtung minen" (warning! mines!)

The field marshal congratulated his local commander on the manner in which he had sewn death-dealing land mines solidly along the strip behind the beaches, beside every road and ditch, along the narrow causeways leading across an artificially inundated area and beneath the pasture-land where red poppies and yellow buttercups were growing.

Rommel remarked: "The enemy won't get through here."

The field marshal gave the Nazi salute and departed. His local commander wiped a sweating forehead and turned to his subordinates with a sigh of relief.

They shared with him the knowledge that along the whole coast only a handful of mines were planted, and in most areas where warning signs were thick there was not a single mine.

Unable to obtain these infernal machines from bomb-battered Germany, and fearing Rommel's wrath if he discovered that fact, the commander had simply posted signs in places where mines should have been.

Behind the non-existent minefields, the Germans here and there had wooden guns made of tree-trunks and mounted on boards. They were designed to look like battery positions in aerial photographs taken from reconnaissance planes.

These were the "props" that Frenchmen now delightedly call "cannon boche" and with which they amuse themselves by pantomime firing.

The Germans had real guns too. But our air force by yesterday had knocked out all of those 88's on the flanks which on D-day had poured an accurate fire toward the beach, pin-pointing jeeps and trucks as they came ashore.

Today, however, our penetration is several miles inland at the deepest point and the Germans have brought some big guns which are pitching shells to the beach, but without observation the fire is inaccurate and more noisy than damaging.

From an apparently good source I learned that although some German prisoners claimed they knew we were coming, the fact was that no general alarm was given until three hours after the initial paratroop landings.

A gentle old French woman, dressed in black with the traditional Norman white scarf around her neck was "hostess" for three months to the captain commanding German coastal defense batteries in this sector.

"The captain went to bed as usual the night before your landing," she said.

"He wasn't excited. He seemed not to be expecting anything extraordinary."

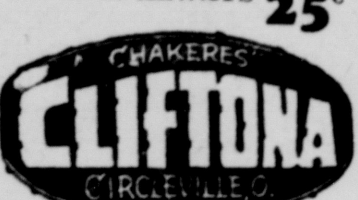

"About three in the morning your planes began bombarding the beach five miles from us, but even then the captain stayed in bed for another hour and a half."

"Then a lot of German soldiers drove up at full speed. They pounded on the door."

"I got up and let them in. They ran in to wake the captain. 'Hauptmann, Hauptmann, the enemy is coming,' they shouted, and told him that warships were shelling the beach."

"Then the captain got dressed. He was in a hurry then. He went out to the battery, but before he left my house he said he would come back. He did not return."

"There's nothing that compares to what the infantryman in actual combat undergoes. If you don't put the doughboy on the ground, you haven't got anything."

head signs reading "achtung minen" (warning! mines!)

The field marshal congratulated his local commander on the manner in which he had sewn death-dealing land mines solidly along the strip behind the beaches, beside every road and ditch, along the narrow causeways leading across an artificially inundated area and beneath the pasture-land where red poppies and yellow buttercups were growing.

Rommel remarked: "The enemy won't get through here."

The field marshal gave the Nazi salute and departed. His local commander wiped a sweating forehead and turned to his subordinates with a sigh of relief.

They shared with him the knowledge that along the whole coast only a handful of mines were planted, and in most areas where warning signs were thick there was not a single mine.

Unable to obtain these infernal machines from bomb-battered Germany, and fearing Rommel's wrath if he discovered that fact, the commander had simply posted signs in places where mines should have been.

Behind the non-existent minefields, the Germans here and there had wooden guns made of tree-trunks and mounted on boards. They were designed to look like battery positions in aerial photographs taken from reconnaissance planes.

These were the "props" that Frenchmen now delightedly call "cannon boche" and with which they amuse themselves by pantomime firing.

The Germans had real guns too. But our air force by yesterday had knocked out all of those 88's on the flanks which on D-day had poured an accurate fire toward the beach, pin-pointing jeeps and trucks as they came ashore.

Today, however, our penetration is several miles inland at the deepest point and the Germans have brought some big guns which are pitching shells to the beach, but without observation the fire is inaccurate and more noisy than damaging.

From an apparently good source I learned that although some German prisoners claimed they knew we were coming, the fact was that no general alarm was given until three hours after the initial paratroop landings.

A gentle old French woman, dressed in black with the traditional Norman white scarf around her neck was "hostess" for three months to the captain commanding German coastal defense batteries in this sector.

"The captain went to bed as usual the night before your landing," she said.

"He wasn't excited. He seemed not to be expecting anything extraordinary."

"About three in the morning your planes began bombarding the beach five miles from us, but even then the captain stayed in bed for another hour and a half. Then a lot of German soldiers drove up at full speed. They pounded on the door."

"I got up and let them in. They ran in to wake the captain. 'Hauptmann, Hauptmann, the enemy is coming,' they shouted, and told him that warships were shelling the beach."

"Then the captain got dressed. He was in a hurry then. He went out to the battery, but before he left my house he said he would come back. He did not return."

First View Of Invading Americans As Seen From French Soil

Eisenhower, U. S. Naval Commander Watch Progress Of Invasion

THIS is the first picture taken from French soil of American soldiers, rifles at the ready, as they waded through the surf from their landing craft onto a French beachhead. The photographer who made this graphic shot was among the very first to reach the beachhead. Note the invasion craft in the background. This is a U. S. Army Signal Corps radiophoto.

GEN. Dwight D. Eisenhower, supreme commander of the Allied invasion forces, is shown at left in this radiophoto as he watched new Allied landings in France from the deck of a warship off the

WHAT IT'S ABOUT

THE Nazi Germans, who are the greatest peril that has yet arisen against modern civilization, are especially dangerous because they have no moral inhibitions. They combine the resources of science with the morality of cave men. They want a system based on mechanical power, discarding alike the teachings of religion and the ethics derived from the human experience of 3,000 years.

It is well for all civilized men and women to keep these basic facts clearly in mind, while the great battles rage in France and western Russia. We may be sure that this is not merely another of the international forays for loot and power that have plagued mankind in so many places and ages. This is a War for the World, in which the wisdom of our military commanders, and the courage and fighting skill of our own sons, may determine the course of history and the way of life for a thousand years.

And let us have no more smart nonsense about "globaloney." In this truly global war, whatever happens anywhere affects the destiny of everybody.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS

NO books for the children at Christmas? That dismal outlook is not entirely impossible, according to a publisher's survey. This showed that in 1942 there were 864 new children's books. Last year there were only 690, and this year the number will be smaller still.

There are two causes. One, lack of paper, cannot be helped. The other is lack of authors. Few writers, apparently, can really tell a story.

There ought to be a cure. Think of all the subjects made possible by the war and the march of science. A good child's book on Alaska, publishers say, would sell like hot cakes; so would one on the Aleutians or China.

How about earning a little money in your spare time by writing a best-selling children's book? But be warned: It is not so easy as it sounds.

HELPERS OF JAPAN

IF helping a man out of a hole makes his rescuer responsible for the victim's later actions, the United States is responsible for Japan.

In 1904 Japan attacked the Russians without warning, very much as at Pearl Harbor. Theodore Roosevelt, who was then President, preferring Japan to Russia, notified the Japanese that in the event of a European combination against her "I should promptly side with Japan to whatever length was necessary on her behalf." Not having to guard against possible attacks in her rear, Japan could concentrate on Russia, and did so, winning the war.

Two years later, according to Tyler Dennett, who discovered all this among Roosevelt's unpublished papers after his

By DREW PEARSON

MANY DELAYS

WASHINGTON—Now that the greatest invasion in the history of modern warfare has started, some of the inside story regarding this, the most controversial question that has confronted the Allies, can be reviewed.

It is no secret that the second front has been the sorest subject of debate between the British and Russians and, at times, even between U. S. and British military leaders, since the war began.

At one time, when the Russians were hard-pressed and fighting for their lives at Stalingrad and in the Winter of 1942-1943, it was feared by some U. S. military observers that Stalin might even withdraw from the war because of bitterness over the fact that the second front was not started.

The controversial question first arose in the early Summer of 1942, a few months after Pearl Harbor, when Foreign Minister Molotov came to London, then to Washington, for important political-military conferences. Although Poland and the Baltic States were on his list of subjects to be discussed, at the very top of the list was the second front.

At that time, the American Army was relatively small and not too well prepared. Molotov's thesis was that we should persuade our British allies, with a million-man army in England, to hit Germany from the West. President Roosevelt had to say that we could not high-pressure an ally.

However, General Marshall did work out a plan for a landing across the Channel in the Fall of 1942. His plan was based on the fact that the Nazis had thrown the cream of their entire army into Russia and had their lines extended as far as Stalingrad, leaving France and Western Europe relatively undefended.

Marshall proposed this instead of the North Africa landing of November, 1942. However, Churchill was not willing to take the chance and held out for his plan to strike through the "soft underbelly of the Axis", namely North Africa and the Mediterranean.

COMPROMISE AT CASABLANCA

The Russians were disappointed; but even more so after Casablanca. There U. S. military and naval leaders were definitely ready to discuss the second front. But Churchill laid down the thesis that in any cross-channel operation, the ratio of troops would have to be about 70 percent American to 30 percent British.

From the British viewpoint, he made a plausible argument for this, pointing out that Britain had lost her "seed" when she poured the cream of her manhood into Flanders Fields in 1914. This, he said, had set England back perhaps a generation, and she could not afford to lose her "seed" again. He also pointed out that England's population was less than one-third that of the U. S. A.

However, at the rate of submarine

death, he even encouraged the Japanese to take over Korea. Though the Japanese have forgotten this kindness of ours, Americans will not forget that the Japanese premier assured Secretary Taft, the future President, who represented the United States in the Korea agreement, that Japan had no desire or intention to seize the Philippines.

All this makes a marvelous exhibit of secret diplomacy at its worst.

Psychosomatic Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.
THE NEW field in medicine called psychosomatic medicine has attracted the dentists and they give promise of producing valuable advice about some of the annoying old habits of mankind. Psychosomatic medicine aims to study the conditions and aberrations of mankind which seem to be due to the interaction of soul and body—psyche—soul, and somatic—body. These troubles constitute about half the worries of man and his doctors.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The particular subjects which have been called to my attention as engaging the dentist's investigation are teeth grinding and clamping and thumb sucking. People write to me about these things all the time and I never know what to tell them because none of the methods of treatment that have ever been suggested seem to me very successful.

Thumb sucking is the concern of the dentist, particularly the orthodontist. It has never been settled just how much harm it does and while it is an unlovely habit, the parents at least can be assured that it never persists into adult life. It may be carried on, however, into the ages of five or even up to ten and in such instances there must be some definite maladjustment of environmental conditions as the cause.

Natural Instinct
Sucking is a perfectly natural instinct for infants. Of course, thumb sucking is a natural substitute for sucking for nutritional purposes. The infant derives pleasure, perhaps to some extent alleviates hunger and relieves tension by thumb sucking. When no one plays with baby it sucks its thumb.
At what point this habit ceases to be helpful and becomes harmful and begins to distort the dental arch and interfere with the free development of the intellect is a question that all parents have to decide for themselves. Attempts to stop it by mechanical restraints are likely to cause more trouble and conflicts than they cure. The best wisdom the dentists can give parents on the subject is in the following paragraphs:

"Do not forget that the activity of sucking is normal. In the first year to 18 months of life, sucking is one of the chief sources of emotional satisfaction for the child.
"If thumb sucking is excessive, do not interfere directly with the activity. Avoid scolding and pulling the thumb out of the mouth, avoid mechanical restraints, avoid foul-tasting applications and, above all, avoid shame, criticism and ridicule.

Encourages Play
"Play with the child more often and use play materials suitable to his age. Encourage him to play with other children.
"See that he has opportunity (space) to be active and to explore.

"If the home atmosphere is not one of happiness, ease and friendliness, the adults should strive to make it so rather than to concern themselves only with the baby's problem. We must remember that the child's psychology is largely determined by parent-child relationships and that a disturbance in the emotional life of the child can usually be attributed to the atmosphere of the home."
Champing and grinding teeth is a much more complicated problem, partly because they lead to wearing of the periodontal membrane of the teeth. Eighty-eight per cent of periodontal cases were found to have champing, grinding habits. Most of the subjects were unconscious of them. In almost all instances they were found in combination with malocclusion, a faulty closure of the upper and lower teeth. Therefore to adjust the malocclusion is the way to do away with grinding and champing teeth habits.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Miss Doris Schreiner of East Mound street, accompanied by her cousin, Miss Ruth Landenberger, of Columbus, left for Norfolk, Va., from where they were to go by boat to New York City to visit the World's Fair.

Enrollment of youths to attend the Citizens' Military Training camp was underway. Dr. V. D. Kerns was Pickaway county enrollment officer.

Miss Polly Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Briggs, North Court street, left for Durham, N. C., to enter Duke university for the Summer course.

10 YEARS AGO

Scouts from every troop in Pickaway county were expected in the crowd of one thousand who were to attend the annual Camporee at Ohio State university, June 15, 16 and 17.

R. L. Brehmer, North Court street, had as his guests for golf and dinner at the Pickaway Country club, Prof. Alex Laurel, Prof. L. C. Chadwick and Gus Poesch of the Floral and Horticulture department of Ohio State university, Columbus.

Arthur Phillips, South Court street, returned home after a five-day trip to New York City.

25 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Mabel Dunn Hopkins presented her pupils in violin recital at Robins hall, Columbus. Howard Beckes, Dwight Weiler, Elizabeth Groce and Evelyn Fohl of Circleville took part with Mrs. C. B. Beckes and Miss Marguerite Fohl as accompanists.

The fifth number of The Circle, edited by members of Circleville high school was issued by Virginia Jones, editor-in-chief; Donald Watt, business manager; Katherine Palm, assistant editor; Louise Renick,

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Watch yourself! Do Willoughby is remembering that little bottle he whipped out when Nora Haight required an antidote against arsenic poisoning. . . . Will the good doctor tell the police the strange fact that you, a stranger, carried so strange a preparation as ferrie hydroxide with him when, strangely, one woman died and another was made seriously ill by the poison for which it was the official antidote?

Dr. Willoughby turned away. He suspects I know something involving the Wright family, thought Ellery. He's an old friend. He brought the three Wright girls into the world. . . . He's uneasy.

Shall I make him still uneasy by confiding that I purchased the drug because I promised Patty Wright her sister Nora wouldn't die? Ellery asked himself.

The family, demanded Chief Dakin. "Where they at?" "Upstairs," answered Bradford. "Mrs. Wright insists that Nora—Mrs. Haight—be moved over to the Wright house."

"This is no place for her, Dakin," said Dr. Willoughby. "Nora's pretty sick. She'll need plenty of care." "It's all right with me. So if you've got no objection, Cart, let's call it a night."

Prosecutor Bradford said stiffly: "None at all."

"Then we'll have a get-together right here in this room in the morning," ordered Dakin. "You tell the Wrights, Cart. Sort of keep it unofficial."

"Are you remaining here?" "For a spell," drawled Dakin. "Got to call in somebody to haul this corpse out of here. Figure I'll phone Duncan's parlors."

"No morgue?" asked Mr. Queen, despite himself. "The Chief's eyes made another inspection. 'Well, no, Mr. Smith. . . . Okay for you, Mr. Lloyd. Go easy on these folks in your paper, hey? This'll raise plenty of hall-lulajah as it is, I guess. . . . No, Mr. Smith. Got to use a reg'lar undertaking parlor. You see,' and the Chief sighed. 'We ain't never had a mystery homicide in Wrightsville before, and I been Chief here for pretty near twenty years. Doc, would you be so kind? Coroner Salomonson's up in Piny Woods on a New Year vacation.'"

"I'll do the autopsy," said Dr. Willoughby shortly. He went out without saying good-night. Carter Bradford walked across the room, stopped, looked back. Jim Haight was still sitting in the chair.

Bradford said in an angry voice: "What are you sitting here for, Haight?" "Jim looked up slowly. 'What?' "You can't sit here all night! Aren't you even going up to your wife?"

"They won't let me," answered Jim. "They won't let me." Suddenly he leaped from the chair and dashed upstairs. They heard the slam of a door—he had gone into his study.

"See you in the morning, gents," said Chief Dakin, blinking at Ellery. They left the Chief in the untidy living room, alone with Rosemary Haight's body. Mr. Queen would like to have stayed, but there was something in Dakin's eyes that discouraged company.

Ellery did not see Patricia Wright until they all gathered in the same untidy room at ten o'clock on the morning of New Year's Day. . . . all except Nora, who was in her bed in the other house, guarded by Ludie. Dr. Willoughby had already seen her this morning, and he forbade her leaving the room or even setting foot out of bed.

Ellery laylaid Pat on Nora's porch. "Before we go in," he said quickly, "I want to explain—"

"I don't blame you, Ellery," Pat was almost as sick-looking as Nora. "It might have been worse. It might have been. . . . Nora. It almost was."

"I'm sorry about Rosemary," said Ellery just before Pat went inside. Ellery lingered on the porch. It was a gray day, like Rosemary Haight's face; a gray day and cold. Emmy DuPre chattered by, stopped, studied Chief Dakin's car at the curb, frowned. . . . walked on slowly, craning at the two houses.

A car drove up. Frank Lloyd jumped out, then Lola Wright. They ran up the walk together. "Nora! Is she all right?" gasped Lola. Ellery nodded. Lola dashed inside.

"I picked Lola up," said Lloyd. He was breathing heavily, too. "She was walking up the Hill. There was a damp copy of the Wrightsville Record in his overcoat pocket. 'Did Lola know?' asked Ellery as they walked into the house.

"No. She was just taking a walk, she said. Nobody knows yet." "They will," remarked Ellery dryly, "when your paper hits the streets."

"You're a snoop," growled Lloyd. "but sometimes I like you. Take my advice and hop the first train out." "I like it here," smiled Ellery. "Why?"

"Because this is a dangerous town." "How so?" "You'll see when the news gets around. Everybody who was at the party that night will be smeared." Lloyd shook his heavy shoulders. "I don't figure you."

"Why bother? For that matter, you're not a simple sum in arithmetic yourself."

"You'll hear plenty about me." "I already have." "I don't know," exclaimed Lloyd savagely. "Why I stand here in the foyer gassing with a nitwit! He shook the floor striding into the living room.

"The poison," said Dr. Willoughby, "is known generally as white arsenic."

They were sitting in a rough circle, like at a séance. Chief Dakin stood at the fireplace, and asked, "What else did you find? That poison part's right. We checked in our lab during the night."

"It's used in medicine mostly as an alternative or tonic," went on the doctor tonelessly. "There's no way of telling from the dregs of the cocktail—at least with accuracy—but judging from the speed with which the poison acted, I'd estimate there was a deadly dose in that glass."

"Prescribe any of that stuff recently for. . . anyone you know, Doc?" muttered Carter Bradford. "No."

"We've established a bit more," said Chief Dakin looking around. "Most probably it was plain ordinary rat poison. And no trace of it was found anywhere except in that one cocktail which Mrs. Haight and her sister-in-law drank." Mr. Queen asked, "Whose fingerprints did you find on the poison glass, Chief Dakin?"

"Mrs. Haight's. Rosemary Haight's. Jim Haight's." Ellery could see them translate silently. Nora's. . . Rosemary's. . . Jim's. . . His own thoughts were of real admiration for Chief Dakin, who had not remained idle after they left him last night. He had done a grade-A job in taking fingerprints promptly.

"And what did your autopsy show?" asked Dakin, deferentially. "Miss Haight died of arsenic trioxide poisoning."

"Yes, sir. Now let's get this organized," said the Chief. "Go ahead, Dakin," declared John F. impatiently.

"Yes, Mr. Wright. So we know the two ladies were poisoned by that one cocktail. Now, who mixed it?" "No one said anything."

"Well, I already know. It was you, Mr. Haight." Jim Haight had not shaved. There were muddy ruts under his eyes.

"Did I?" There was a frog in his throat; he cleared it several times. "If you say so—I mixed so many—"

"And who came in from the kitchen and handed out the tray of drinks?" asked Chief Dakin. "Including the one that was poisoned? You did, Mr. Haight. Am I wrong?"

"If you're trying to insinuate—" began Hermione in an imperious voice.

"All right, Mrs. Wright," soothed the Chief. "Now Mr. Haight, you handed it out, but—did you leave those cocktails you were making for any time until you brought the tray into this room?"

"Look," said Jim. "Maybe I'm crazy. Maybe the things that happened in and around my kitchen for a long time. What is this? Am I suspected of having tried to poison my wife?"

John F.'s hand dropped from his eyes. Hermy's color came back, and Pat stared at Jim.

"This is nonsense, Chief Dakin!" "Of course I brought that tray in here!" Jim got up and began to walk up and down before the Chief like an orator. "I'd just mixed the Manhattan—that last batch—and was going to put the cherries in, but then I had to leave the pantry for a few minutes. That's it!"

"Well, now," said Dakin heartily, "now we're getting places. Mr. Haight. Could someone have slipped in from the living room and poisoned one of them cocktails without you knowing or seeing?"

"I didn't poison that cocktail," said Jim, "so somebody must have slipped in."

Dakin turned swiftly. "Who left the living room while Mr. Haight was mixing that last mess of drinks in the kitchen? Think hard on it!" Ellery lit a cigarette. Someone must have noticed that he had been missing simultaneously with Jim. It was inevitable. . . . But then they all began to chatter at once.

"We'll never get anywhere this way," protested the Chief. And this time Dakin's voice was quite chill, its chill deepening the chill in the room. "The important point is: Who had control of the distribution of the drinks? Answer me that!"

STARS SAY—

For Saturday, June 10

AN EVENTFUL and surprising set of circumstances should characterize this day, according to the lunar and mutual aspects. Adventure, romance, the unique and exceptional may materialize in both business and private affairs. These may suddenly develop new or strange angles, calling for ingenuity and skill of rare discrimination, to reach advanced levels of gratification. Sudden and unpredictable matters may develop, from the blue, bringing much innovation into static affairs. It is a time to push for novelty and originality, although with proper restraints of the impulses and emotions. Make friends and seek favors.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be on the eve of a year of novelty, innovation, the strange, unique and literary editor; Catherine Ruggles, photography; Margaret Boggs, humor; Tom Renick, athletics; Hilda Burns and Marion Sensenbrenner, artists.

probably glamorous, with change, travel, new and surprising denouements. Romance and adventure loom large, and should bring much happiness and gratification, providing the emotions and impulses are properly restrained. Strange and dramatic experiences are probable, with new friends and interests, of magnitude and importance on the future career.

A child born on this day may have unusual talents, graces and abilities, taking it far on the highway to conspicuous achievement or renown.

For Sunday, June 11
SUNDAY'S horoscope is a propitious one for all affairs of church and state as well as all graces and avocations of the social, domestic and romantic scene. However, there should be some conservatism in indulgences or lavish outlay in parties, or festive occasions. There is hint of extravagance, or being involved in some form of trickery or imposition. Shun over-generosity.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a happy, prosperous and romantic year, with much stirring by way of celebration, or festive occasions. In this there may be a tendency to over-spend or other unjustified expenditures and this attended by duplicity or imposition. Shun all excessive indulgences and safeguard all legal writings or contracts.

A child born on this day should have a generous and indulgent nature, making it easily victimized or duped. It may be popular and successful, eventually.

Resignation of Gen. Sosnowski | Congress Speeds Appropriation Clears Russian-Polish Picture Bills Disposal to Avoid Jam

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Two significant developments between Russia and the Polish government-in-exile have heartened Allied observers to the belief that peace between the two governments is in sight and that the results may set a definite pattern for other members of the United Nations.

Washington is watching closely for any signs of coercion on Russia's part in future relations, but there is general agreement that the resignation of Gen. Kazimierz Sosnowski as president-designate of the Polish exile group may produce harmony in the overall picture.

Sosnowski
The general has been an outspoken foe of the Soviet. And his resignation followed word received in London from the Polish underground that the Polish people want him dived of his political power.

Long Foe
The second peace-producing factor is Russian assurances that Polish children in Soviet territory may receive religious instruction. In predominantly Catholic Poland, this announcement, if believed, may go far to alleviate the strained religious situation which has been an irritable corollary to the matter of power politics in eastern Europe.

Of Soviet
CONGRESS HAS BEEN PICKING UP a little speed in disposing of appropriation bills. But it still is not out of the woods, and unless it continues to move rapidly it will be in a jam by the time the Republican national convention opens in Chicago June 26.

This means a recess for the GOP convocation is highly doubtful. There is also considerable doubt as to whether there will be a summer recess.

COMING FOR PARK OPENING

TED LEWIS

"High Hatted Tragedian of Song"

"IS EVERYBODY HAPPY?"

TED, we are all mighty happy to have you with us for the formal opening of our municipal park, the public playground named after you and which you helped make possible with another of your generous gifts to worthy local undertakings.

The pride in your home town that you have exhibited through your many years of theatrical life is only equalled by our pride in you as our Number One citizen. Few other men in your position would have carried through the long years the interest and attachment you have for the community we proudly call home.

We recall you as a kid when Prof. Oscar Ameringer fired you from his boys' band for pepping up the "Poet and Peasant," as the clarinet player in E. L. Peters' nickelodeon, when you passed handbills, sold peanuts, ushered and led an Uncle Tom's Cabin bloodhound in a Main street parade.

Then when you put together a jazzy clarinet, a moth-eaten high hat and sentimental song-talk and strutted on the big time we rejoiced over the success of a home town boy. That was a long time ago and the spotlight has since dimmed for most of your contemporaries.

You are quoted as saying, "Sometimes I lie awake nights and wonder how I do it. I get by with murder." But your form of murder always has been liked in America and always will be liked. We are particularly fond of it around here.

We remember your early discouraging stage experiences and your subsequent rise to a fame that has never lessened. We recall your first break when you went to Rector's as a clarinetist in Earl Fuller's band and remained for two years. We know of your travels in every state in the Union, of four professional trips abroad, of your appearances before seven Presidents, the king of England and countless members of royalty. We were pleased by your great hit in London. We know and hum the songs you have made famous.

We were proud right along with you when in July of 1941 you made your 50,000th appearance as a popular public entertainer. We have seen you in pictures and have heard you on the radio. We play your records on our phonographs.

You have declared that being a musician does not count and believe that your success is due to showmanship. No one disputes that you are a great showman, the best in your line, but heretofore we also believe that your success is due to your interest in humanity, your simplicity of manner, your never ending effort to bring just a little more happiness into the world.

Ted, we know that you have never forgotten less fortunate men, that you have given freely of your profits to worthy causes regardless of race, color or creed. We are not proud of you just because of the name you have made for yourself in the world, but because you are Ted Lewis, the one-time Theodore Leopold Friedman, of Circleville.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUND and RECREATION CENTER

Equipment now installed at Ted Lewis park makes it an attractive playground and recreation center. It is open to the public and all citizens are urged to take advantage of the property not only on the opening day of the season, but throughout the Summer as well. Children and adults have access to—

- Fine Picnic Grounds
- Picnic Tables
- Outdoor Furnaces
- City Water Supply
- Hard Ball Diamond
- Soft Ball Diamond
- Football Field
- Basketball Court
- Horseshoe Pitching Courts
- Badminton Court
- Croquet Courses
- Safe, Modern Swings
- Teeter Totters
- Sand Boxes for Children
- Toilet Facilities

Baseballs and bats, footballs and basketballs may be used gratis by youths on request to the park supervisor who is present at all times the park is open to the public.

The Kahn team is ranked high by the American Softball Association and is generally recognized as one of the best girl aggregations in the country.

Little Sara Willoughby is on first base. In the opinion of many sports writers she is absolutely tops among girls at this position. Last year she accepted 65 chances before making an error.

Margie (Pat) Ryan, who last year headed the Columbus Girls Class A league in fielding and hitting, appears at second. She is captain.

Helen (Red) Wagner is at shortstop and her playing is comparable to that of any man.

Joan Chapman is at third, playing her first year and recognized as a coming great.

Elizabeth and Margaret Merrick, twin sisters, play left and center field respectively. Margaret last year equalled the world record for circling the bases in 10¼ seconds. She also is capable of playing any position on the team.

Mildred Branch, known for her rifle-like arm, is in right field. She has thrown many a runner out at the plate this season and last.

Mary Geddes and "Ginny" James are the mound performers and are among the very best. The receiver has not yet been decided.

In the last two years the Kahn girls have won 70 games and lost 12. They have been Columbus and district champions for the last four years. Last year they were state finalists, but were defeated by Dayton 7 to 4. This year, the Kahns opened the season with the same Dayton team and won by a count of 5 to 0.

The Circleville Jaycees, composed of prominent young business men of the city, also is a distinguished aggregation. As a member of the city softball league it has yet to win a game, although it has one victory by virtue of a forfeit. "Everyone else has beaten us at least once, but we just can not let girls do it," a spokesman for the organization declared today. The team is engaged in what it calls practice and promises to be in top form for the clash with the Kahns.

Ross Discusses Russia For Washington Grange

Cookie Contest Award Goes To Mrs. Warner

Edgar Ross of Circleville gave an excellent talk on "Russia" at the meeting of Washington grange Friday in the Washington school auditorium. Seventy-five were present for the fine meeting.

The grange held its cookie contest at the meeting, 18 entries being made. Mrs. Lawrence Warner won first prize; Mrs. Hazel Bowman, second; Mrs. F. K. Blair, third, and Miss Hulda Leist, fourth. The fine display of entries was a feature at the meeting. Mrs. Roger Hedges of Ashville served as judge.

Other numbers of the delightful program were two vocal solos, "Trees" and "Morning", by Mrs. Robert Lawrence with Miss Dorothy Glick as piano accompanist. Miss Mary Walters entertained the group with a reading, "Psychoanalysis."

During the pleasant social hour, the cookies were served with a seasonal lunch.

Ralph DeLong, worthy master, was in the chair for the business hour. It was announced that the grange would celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary at the next session, June 23. Members are asked to take a covered dish, sandwiches and table service for the dinner.

Circle 7

Twenty-seven members of Circle 7 of the W. S. C. S. of the Methodist church enjoyed a delightful meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. Noah G. Spangler, West High street. Five guests, Mrs. James Harrar, New York City, Mrs. Ida Lerch, Mrs. Ned Bell, Mrs. Carrie Patton and Miss Mary Ellen Young, joined the group for the evening.

Mrs. Charles E. Stofor, chairman of the circle, conducted the opening business hour and received the reports of the secretary and treasurer and the flower chairman. Plans were discussed for a rummage sale for June 17. The circle will have a picnic in August, time and place to be announced later. A profitable auction sale was held.

Mrs. Frank Morrison, conducted the devotionals on the theme, "The Lord's Song in a Strange Land," and led the group in the prayer of consecration.

Mrs. Walter F. Heine gave an interesting talk on "Mexico." Mrs. Spangler, assisted by Mrs. Grace Renick, Mrs. R. F. Lilly, Mrs. Frank Kline, Jr., and Mrs. Harold Danner, served a dessert lunch.

Committee to arrange for the August picnic includes: Mrs. Harold Sharpe, Mrs. Ellsworth Coffland and Mrs. Frank Kline.

Wiener Roast

The Misses Phyllis, Norma Jean, Rosemary and Martha Barthelmas entertained a group of friends Wednesday at a wiener roast at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barthelmas, of Wayne township.

Games were enjoyed after the delightful lunch.

Among those present were: the Misses Marilyn Barthelmas, Daisy Boyer, Genevieve Boyer, Jean Campbell, Olive Cross, Mary Cross, Helen Dean, Evelyn Dowden, Elizabeth Downing, Ann Downing, Joan Easter, Margie Estep, Gladys Fullen, Nancy Fullen, Clammarie Greene, Joan Hoff-

The program arranged by Mrs. Fee included readings by Mrs. Ruth Aldenderfer, Mrs. Leah Dewey and Miss Myrna Jean Wardell. A contest was won by Mrs. N. I. Mowery. The program closed with singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Mrs. Frank Noggle was received as a new member. At the close of the afternoon, lunch was served by Mrs. Wardell, Mrs. Fee, Mrs. Leist, Mrs. Dewey and Mrs. Molly Rodgers.

Women's Association
Women's association of the Presbyterian church held its June meeting Friday in the social room of the church with 35 present for the afternoon. Mrs. George Bentley conducted the fine devotional service, including two hymns, the Scripture lesson and prayer. Mrs. Bentley also read a very appropriate poem, "Since the War," by Grace Noll Crowell.

Miss Florence Dunton, president, was in the chair for the business meeting and received the monthly reports. The association decided to donate $25 to $40 to the deacons' fund to assist any boy or girl of the church to attend a camping period at Camp Wildwood, north of Worthington, or the Summer Youth Conference at Wooster.

It was announced that Group A would have charge of the program for the September session, the association recessing for the Summer months. The programs of the association will be devoted to the business, missionary and social departments of the church.

Immediately after the close of session, Groups B and F, led respectively by Mrs. Will Mack and Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker, held meetings.

PROCESSION TO MARK CORPUS CHRISTI FEAST

For the feast of Corpus Christi St. Joseph's Catholic church will hold a solemn procession following the 9:30 o'clock high mass which will be sung by the Rev. Edward Reidy.

The procession will be formed by an acolyte carrying the Crucifix with small figures immediately back of the crucifix bearer and the boys next in line. All persons in the congregation will form in line after the children when the choir will lead in the singing of "Pange Lingua Glorios." Following the procession, Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament will be given.

For the service the choir will sing the mass of St. Angela with "Ecce Vultus" for the offertory. Sunday masses for the warm months will be at 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock.

WHAT IT'S ABOUT

THE Nazi Germans, who are the greatest peril that has yet arisen against modern civilization, are especially dangerous because they have no moral inhibitions. They combine the resources of science with the morality of cave men. They want a system based on mechanical power, discarding alike the teachings of religion and the ethics derived from the human experience of 3,000 years.

It is well for all civilized men and women to keep these basic facts clearly in mind, while the great battles rage in France and western Russia. We may be sure that this is not merely another of the international forays for loot and power that have plagued mankind in so many places and ages. This is a War for the World, in which the wisdom of our military commanders, and the courage and fighting skill of our own sons, may determine the course of history and the way of life for a thousand years.

And let us have no more smart nonsense about "globaloney." In this truly global war, whatever happens anywhere affects the destiny of everybody.

CHILDREN'S BOOKS

NO books for the children at Christmas? That dismal outlook is not entirely impossible, according to a publisher's survey. This showed that in 1942 there were 864 new children's books. Last year there were only 690, and this year the number will be smaller still.

There are two causes. One, lack of paper, cannot be helped. The other is lack of authors. Few writers, apparently, can really tell a story.

There ought to be a cure. Think of all the subjects made possible by the war and the march of science. A good child's book on Alaska, publishers say, would sell like hot cakes; so would one on the Aleutians or China.

How about earning a little money in your spare time by writing a best-selling children's book? But be warned: It is not so easy as it sounds.

HELPERS OF JAPAN

IF helping a man out of a hole makes his rescuer responsible for the victim's later actions, the United States is responsible for Japan.

In 1904 Japan attacked the Russians without warning, very much as at Pearl Harbor. Theodore Roosevelt, who was then President, preferring Japan to Russia, notified the Japanese that in the event of a European combination against her "I should promptly side with Japan to whatever length was necessary on her behalf." Not having to guard against possible attacks in her rear, Japan could concentrate on Russia, and did so, winning the war.

Two years later, according to Tyler Dennett, who discovered all this among Roosevelt's unpublished papers after his

The WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

MANY DELAYS

WASHINGTON—Now that the greatest invasion in the history of modern warfare has started, some of the inside story regarding this, the most controversial question that has confronted the Allies, can be reviewed.

It is no secret that the second front has been the sorest subject of debate between the British and Russians and, at times, even between U. S. and British military leaders, since the war began.

At one time, when the Russians were hard-pressed and fighting for their lives at Stalingrad and in the Winter of 1942-1943, it was feared by some U. S. military observers that Stalin might even withdraw from the war because of bitterness over the fact that the second front was not started.

The controversial question first arose in the early Summer of 1942, a few months after Pearl Harbor, when Foreign Minister Molotov came to London, then to Washington, for important political-military conferences. Although Poland and the Baltic States were on his list of subjects to be discussed, at the very top of the list was the second front.

At that time, the American Army was relatively small and not too well prepared. Molotov's thesis was that we should persuade our British allies, with a million-man army in England, to hit Germany from the West. President Roosevelt had to say that we could not high-pressure an ally.

However, General Marshall did work out a plan for a landing across the Channel in the Fall of 1942. His plan was based on the fact that the Nazis had thrown the cream of their entire army into Russia and had their lines extended as far as Stalingrad, leaving France and Western Europe relatively undefended.

Marshall proposed this instead of the North Africa landing of November, 1942. However, Churchill was not willing to take the chance and held out for his plan to strike through the "soft underbelly of the Axis", namely North Africa and the Mediterranean.

COMPROMISE AT CASABLANCA

The Russians were disappointed; but even more so after Casablanca. There U. S. military and naval leaders were definitely ready to discuss the second front. But Churchill laid down the thesis that in any cross-channel operation, the ratio of troops would have to be about 70 percent American to 30 percent British.

From the British viewpoint, he made a plausible argument for this, pointing out that Britain had lost her "seed" when she poured the cream of her manhood into Flanders Fields in 1914. This, he said, had set England back perhaps a generation, and she could not afford to lose her "seed" again. He also pointed out that England's population was less than one-third that of the U. S. A.

death, he even encouraged the Japanese to take over Korea.

Though the Japanese have forgotten this kindness of ours, Americans will not forget that the Japanese premier assured Secretary Taft, the future President, who represented the United States in the Korea agreement, that Japan had no desire or intention to seize the Philippines.

All this makes a marvelous exhibit of secret diplomacy at its worst.

Resignation of Gen. Sosnowski | Congress Speeds Appropriation
Clears Russian-Polish Picture | Bills Disposal to Avoid Jam

Special to Central Press

WASHINGTON—Two significant developments between Russia and the Polish government-in-exile have heartened Allied observers to the belief that peace between the two governments is in sight and that the results may set a definite pattern for other members of the United Nations.

Washington is watching closely for any signs of coercion on Russia's part in future relations, but there is general agreement that the resignation of Gen. Kazimierz Sosnowski as president-designate of the Polish exile group may produce harmony in the overall picture.

The general has been an outspoken foe of the Soviet. And his resignation followed word received in London from the Polish underground that the Polish people want him dived of his political power.

The second peace-producing factor is Russian assurances that Polish children in Soviet territory may receive religious instruction. In predominantly Catholic Poland, this announcement, if believed, may go far to alleviate the strained religious situation which has been an irritable corollary to the matter of power politics in eastern Europe.

CONGRESS HAS BEEN PICKING UP a little speed in disposing of appropriation bills. But it still is not out of the woods, and unless it continues to move rapidly it will be in a jam by the time the Republican national convention opens in Chicago June 26.

This means a recess for the GOP convocation is highly doubtful. There is also considerable doubt as to whether there will be a summer recess.

For one thing, an invasion of Europe from the west will put many senators and representatives in a different temper with respect to taking a summer holiday to work on their election campaigns. They may feel the best way to conduct a re-election campaign will be to stay on the job.

IT'S BEGINNING TO LOOK like the mass sedition trial of 27 men and two women accused of having attempted to shake the morale of the nation's armed forces with isolationist and pacifist writings will be with Washington for the rest of the summer at least. The turbulent case has now gone into its seventh week.

Only on May 23 did the first evidence get into the already-long record. Thus, most of the first month and a half was taken up by preliminaries.

OPA IS STILL SCARED TO DEATH to mention the past college and university faculty connections of some of its high officials. This goes back to last summer when Congress raised considerable fuss about "long-haired" college professors in important OPA price policy jobs.

Congress passed an act requiring that the professors get the heave-ho and that practical business men be brought in to replace them. OPA Boss Bowles complied and the furor died down.

But OPA is still skittish where its former college profs are concerned. A prime example was announcement of the appointment of Charles F. Phillips as OPA rationing chief.

OPA made no mention of where Phillips came from. The reason: He's an economic professor on leave from Colgate university.

OPT'S TOP MAN, CHESTER BOWLES, sees red when it is insinuated his agency may further ease up on rationing just prior to the November elections.

At a recent press conference, a reporter queried Bowles on such prospects. The OPA chief strode to the front of his desk, glaring at the questioner: "Do you want to bet?" he snapped.

The reporter groped for words, then replied: "How much?"

A gale of laughter disposed of the issue.

Psychosomatic Medicine

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M.D.

THE NEW field in medicine called psychosomatic medicine has attracted the dentists and they give promise of producing valuable advice about some of the annoying old habits of mankind. Psychosomatic medicine aims to study the conditions and aberrations of mankind which seem to be due to the interaction of soul and body—psyche—soul, and somatic—body. These troubles constitute about half the worries of man and his doctors.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

The particular subjects which have been called to my attention as engaging the dentist's investigation are teeth grinding and clamping and thumb sucking. People write to me about these things all the time and I never know what to tell them because none of the methods of treatment that have ever been suggested seem to me very successful.

Thumb sucking is the concern of the dentist, particularly the orthodontist. It has never been settled just how much harm it does and while it is an unlovely habit, the parents at least can be assured that it never persists into adult life. It may be carried on, however, into the ages of five or even up to ten and in such instances there must be some definite maladjustment of environmental conditions as the cause.

Natural Instinct

Sucking is a perfectly natural instinct for infants. Of course, thumb sucking is a natural substitute for sucking for nutritional purposes. The infant derives pleasure, perhaps to some extent alleviates hunger and relieves tension by thumb sucking. When no one plays with baby it sucks its thumb.

At what point this habit ceases to be helpful and becomes harmful and begins to distort the dental arch and interfere with the free development of the intellect is a question that all parents have to decide for themselves. Attempts to stop it by mechanical restraints are likely to cause more trouble and conflicts than they cure. The best wisdom the dentists can give parents on the subject is in the following paragraphs:

"Do not forget that the activity of sucking is normal. In the first year to 18 months of life, sucking is one of the chief sources of emotional satisfaction for the child.

"If thumb sucking is excessive, do not interfere directly with the activity. Avoid scolding and pulling the thumb out of the mouth, avoid mechanical restraints, avoid foul-tasting applications and, above all, avoid shame, criticism and ridicule.

Encourage Play

"Play with the child more often and use play materials suitable to his age. Encourage him to play with other children.

"See that he has opportunity (space) to be active and to explore.

"If the home atmosphere is not one of happiness, ease and friendliness, the adults should strive to make it so rather than to concern themselves only with the baby's problem. We must remember that the child's psychology is largely determined by parent-child relationships and that a disturbance in the emotional life of the child can usually be attributed to the atmosphere of the home."

Champing and grinding teeth is a much more complicated problem, partly because they lead to wearing off the periodontal membrane of the teeth. Eighty-eight per cent of periodontal cases were found to have champing, grinding habits. Most of the subjects were unconscious of them. In almost all instances they were found in combination with malocclusion, a faulty closure of the upper and lower teeth. Therefore to adjust the malocclusion is the way to do away with grinding and champing teeth habits.

Looking Back in Pickaway County

FIVE YEARS AGO

Miss Doris Schreiner of East Mound street, accompanied by her cousin, Miss Ruth Landenberg, of Columbus, left for Norfolk, Va., from where they were to go by boat to New York City to visit the World's Fair.

Enrollment of youths to attend the Citizens' Military Training camp was underway. Dr. V. D. Kerns was Pickaway county enrollment officer.

Miss Polly Briggs, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Briggs, North Court street, left for Durham, N. C., to enter Duke university for the Summer course.

10 YEARS AGO

Scouts from every troop in Pickaway county were expected in the crowd of one thousand who were to attend the annual Camporee at Ohio State university, June 15, 16 and 17.

R. L. Brehmer, North Court street, had as his guests for golf and dinner at the Pickaway Country club, Prof. Alex Laurel, Prof. L. C. Chadwick and Gus Proesch of the Floral and Horticulture department of Ohio State university, Columbus.

Arthur Phillips, South Court street, returned home after a five-day trip to New York City.

25 YEARS AGO

Mrs. Mabel Dunn Hopkins presented her pupils in violin recital at Robins hall, Columbus. Howard Beckes, Dwight Weiler, Elizabeth Groce and Evelyn Fohl of Circleville took part with Mrs. C. B. Beckes and Miss Marguerite Fohl as accompanists.

The fifth number of The Circle, edited by members of Circleville high school was issued by Virginia Jones, editor-in-chief; Donald Watt, business manager; Katherine Palm, assistant editor; Louise Renick,

CHAPTER NINETEEN

Watch yourself! Doc Willoughby is remembering that little bottle you whipped out when Nora Haight required an antidote against arsenic poisoning. . . Will the good doctor tell the police the strange fact that you, a stranger, carried so strange a preparation as ferric hydroxide with him when, strangely, one woman died and another was made seriously ill by the poison for which it was the official antidote?

Dr. Willoughby turned away. He suspects I know something involving the Wright family, thought Ellery. He's an old friend. He brought the three Wright girls into the world. . . He's uneasy.

Should I make him still uneasy by confiding that I purchased the drug because I promised Patty Wright her sister Nora wouldn't die? Ellery asked himself.

"The family," demanded Chief Dakin. "Where they at?" "Upstairs," answered Bradford. "Mrs. Wright insists that Nora—Mrs. Haight—be moved over to the Wright house."

"This is no place for her, Dakin," said Dr. Willoughby. "Nora's pretty sick. She'll need plenty of care." "It's all right with me," responded the Chief. "If it's all right with the Prosecutor."

Bradford nodded hastily and bit his lip. "Don't you want to question them?"

"Well, now," said the Chief slowly. "I can't see the sense of making the Wrights feel worse than they feel already. At least right now. So if you've got no objection, Cart, let's call it a night."

Prosecutor Bradford said stiffly: "None at all."

"Then we'll have a get-together right here in this room in the morning," ordered Dakin. "You tell the Wrights, Cart. Sort of keep it unofficial."

"Are you remaining here?"

"For a spell," drawled Dakin. "Got to call in somebody to haul this corpse out of here. Figure I'll phone Duncan's parlors."

"No morgue?" ask Mr. Queen, despite himself.

The Chief's eyes made another inspection. "Well, no, Mr. Smith. Okay for you, Mr. Lloyd. Go easy on these folks in your paper, hey? This'll raise plenty of hallelujah as it is. I guess. . . No, sir, Mr. Smith. Got to use a regular undertaker, parlor. You see, and the Chief sighed, "we ain't never had a mystery homicide in Wrightsville before, and I been Chief here for pretty near twenty years. Doe, would you be so kind? Coroner Sallowman's up in Piny Woods on a New Year vacation."

"I'll do the autopsy," said Dr. Willoughby shortly. He went out without saying goodnight.

Carter Bradford walked across the room, stopped, looked back. Jim Haight was still sitting in the chair.

Bradford said in an angry voice: "What are you sitting here for, Haight?"

Jim looked up slowly. "What?" "You can't sit here all night! And you even going up to your wife?"

"They won't let me," answered Jim. "They won't let me."

Suddenly he leaped from the chair and dashed upstairs. They heard the slam of a door—he had gone into his study.

"See you in the morning, gents," said Chief Dakin, blinking at Ellery.

They left the Chief in the untidy living room, alone with Rosemary Haight's body. Mr. Queen would like to have stayed, but there was something in Dakin's eyes that discouraged company.

Ellery did not see Patricia Wright until they all gathered in the same untidy room at ten o'clock on the morning of New Year's Day. . . all except Nora, who was in her bed in the other house, guarded by Ludie. Dr. Willoughby had already seen her this morning, and he forbade her leaving the room or even setting foot out of bed.

Ellery laylaid Pat on Nora's porch. "Before we go in," he said quickly, "I want to explain—"

"I don't blame you, Ellery," Pat was almost as sick-looking as Nora. "It might have been worse. It might have been. . . Nora. It almost was."

"I'm sorry about Rosemary," said Ellery just before Pat went inside. Ellery lingered on the porch. It was a gray day, like Rosemary Haight's face: a gray day and cold.

Emmy DuPre chattered by, stopped, studied Chief Dakin's car at the curb, frowned. . . walked on slowly, craning at the two houses.

A car drove up. Frank Lloyd jumped out, then Lola Wright. They ran up the walk together.

"Nora! Is she all right?" gasped Lola. Ellery nodded. Lola dashed inside.

"I picked Lola up," said Lloyd. He was breathing heavily, too. "She was walking up the Hill. There was a damp copy of the Wrightsville Record in his overcoat pocket."

"Did Lola know?" asked Ellery as they walked into the house.

"No. She was just taking a walk, she said. Nobody knows yet."

"They will," remarked Ellery dryly, "when your paper hits the streets."

"You're a snoop," growled Lloyd. "But sometimes I like you. Take my advice and hop the first train out."

"I like it here," smiled Ellery. "Why?"

"Because this is a dangerous town."

"How so?"

"You'll see when the news gets around. Everybody who was at the party last night will be smeared."

Lloyd shook his heavy shoulders. "I don't figure you."

"Why bother? For that matter, you're not a simple sum in arithmetic yourself."

"I already have plenty."

"I don't know," exclaimed Lloyd savagely, "why I stand here in the foyer gassing with a nitwit! He shook the floor striding into the living room."

"The poison," said Dr. Willoughby, "is known generally as white arsenic."

They were sitting in a rough circle, like at a séance. Chief Dakin stood at the fireplace, and asked, "What else did you find?" That poison part's right. We checked in our lab during the night."

"It's used in medicine mostly as an alternative or tonic," went on the doctor tonelessly. "There's no way of telling from the drugs of the cocktail—at least with accuracy—but judging from the speed with which the poison acted, I estimate there was a deadly dose in that glass."

"Prescribe any of that stuff recently for. . . anyone you know, Doc?" muttered Carter Bradford.

"No."

"We've established a bit more," said Chief Dakin looking around. "Most probably it was plain ordinary rat poison. And no trace of it was found anywhere except in that one cocktail which Mrs. Haight and her sister-in-law drank."

Mr. Queen asked, "Whose fingerprints did you find on the poison glass, Chief Dakin?"

"Mrs. Haight's. Rosemary Haight's. Jim Haight's."

Ellery could see them translate silently. Nora's. . . Rosemary's. . . Jim's. . . His own thoughts were of real admiration for Chief Dakin, who had not remained idle after they left him last night. He had done a grade-A job in taking fingerprints promptly.

"And what did your autopsy show?" asked Dakin deferentially. "Miss Haight died of arsenic tri-oxide poisoning."

"Yes, sir. Now let's get this organized," said the Chief.

"Go ahead, Dakin," declared John F. impatiently.

"Yes, Mr. Wright. So we know the two ladies were poisoned by that one cocktail. Now, who mixed it?"

No one said anything. "Well, I already know. It was you, Mr. Haight."

There were muddy ruts under his eyes.

"Did I?" There was a frog in his throat; he cleared it several times. "If you say so—I mixed so many—"

"And who came in from the kitchen and handed out the tray of drinks?" asked Chief Dakin. "Including the one that was poisoned?"

You did, Mr. Haight. Am I wrong?"

"If you're trying to insinuate—" began Hermione in an imperious voice.

"All right, Mrs. Wright," soothed the Chief. "Now Mr. Haight, you handed it out, but—did you leave those cocktails you were making for any time until you brought the tray into this room?"

"Look," said Jim. "Maybe I'm crazy. Maybe the things that happened last night knocked my brains for a loop. What is this? Am I suspected of having tried to poison my wife?"

John F.'s hand dropped from his eyes, Hermie's color came back, and Pat stared at Jim.

"This is nonsense, Chief Dakin!" declared Hermie coldly.

"Of course I brought that tray in here!" Jim got up and began to walk up and down before the Chief like an orator. "I just mixed the Manhattan—that last batch—and was going to put the cherries in, but then I had to leave the pantry for a few minutes. That's it!"

"Well, now," said Dakin heartily, "now we're getting places, Mr. Haight. Could someone have slipped in from the living room and poisoned one of them cocktails without you knowing or seeing?"

"I didn't poison that cocktail," said Jim, "so somebody must have slipped in."

Dakin turned swiftly. "Who left the living room while Mr. Haight was mixing that last mess of drinks in the kitchen? Think hard on it!"

Ellery lit a cigarette. Someone must have noticed that he had been missing some time, said Chief Dakin. It was inevitable. . . But then they all began to chatter at once.

"We'll never get anywhere this way," protested the Chief. And this time Dakin's voice was quite chill, its chill deepening the chill in the room. "The important point is: Who had control of the distribution of the drinks? Answer me that!"

RED BIRDS WIN TIGHT CONTEST WITH K. C. BLUES

By International News Service
Milwaukee today maintained its enormous lead in the American Association standings, holding the top spot with 36 wins and 11 losses, although yesterday's game with Toledo on Brewer grounds was postponed because of rain.

Columbus in second place with 27 wins and 17 losses defeated the Kansas City Blues by the tight score of 2 to 1. The game turned into a pitching duel between Johnny Podgajny and Don Johnson, both right handers.

The Birds gained the winning margin in the second frame. It was threatened however in later innings but Podgajny seemed to know the right combination to hold the home teamers in check. The Blues made their only tally in the sixth.

St. Paul and the Louisville Colonels broke even in the double-header played at the Minnesota city. The Saints behind the seventh hit hurling of Otho Nicholas, put the first game on ice to the tune of 4 to 2 but lost in the nightcap 5 to 1.

The Indianapolis Indians snapped a nine-game losing streak to defeat Minneapolis 3 to 2, behind superlative hurling by John Hutchings. He allowed only five hits and struck out eight. The Millers scored only in the fifth frame when Jack Aragon hit a home off Hutchings with one man on base. Hugh Poland knocked a home run for the visitors.

Ross Discusses Russia For Washington Grange

Cookie Contest Award Goes To Mrs. Warner

Edgar Ross of Circleville gave an excellent talk on "Russia" at the meeting of Washington Grange Friday in the Washington school auditorium. Seventy-five were present for the fine meeting.

The grange held its cookie contest at the meeting, 18 entries being made. Mrs. Lawrence Warner won first prize; Mrs. Hazel Bowman, second; Mrs. F. K. Blair, third, and Miss Hulda Leist, fourth. The fine display of entries was a feature at the meeting. Mrs. Roger Hedges of Ashville served as judge.

Other numbers of the delightful program were two vocal solos, "Trees" and "Morning", by Mrs. Robert Lawrence with Miss Dorothy Glick as piano accompanist. Miss Mary Walters entertained the group with a reading, "Psychic Analysis."

During the pleasant social hour, the cookies were served with a seasonal lunch.

Ralph DeLong, worthy master, was in the chair for the business hour. It was announced that the grange would celebrate its twenty-fifth anniversary at the next session, June 23. Members are asked to take a covered dish, sandwiches and table service for the dinner.

Circle 7. Twenty-seven members of Circle 7 of the W. S. C. S. of the Methodist church enjoyed a delightful meeting Friday at the home of Mrs. Noah G. Spangler, West High street. Five guests, Mrs. James Harrar, New York City, Mrs. Ida Lerch, Mrs. Ned Bell, Mrs. Carrie Patton and Miss Mary Ellen Young, joined the group for the evening.

Mrs. Charles E. Stofor, chairman of the circle, conducted the opening business hour and received the reports of the secretary and treasurer and the flower chairman. Plans were discussed for a rummage sale for June 17. The circle will have a picnic in August, time and place to be announced later. A profitable auction sale was held.

Mrs. Frank Morrison, conducted the devotionals on the theme, "The Lord's Song in a Strange Land", and led the group in the prayer of consecration.

Mrs. Walter F. Heine gave an interesting talk on "Mexico." Mrs. Spangler, assisted by Mrs. Grace Renick, Mrs. R. F. Lilly, Mrs. Frank Kline, Jr., and Mrs. Harold Danner, served a dessert lunch.

Committee to arrange for the August picnic includes: Mrs. Harold Sharpe, Mrs. Ellsworth Coffland and Mrs. Frank Kline.

Wiener Roast. The Misses Phyllis, Norma Jean, Rosemary and Martha Barthelmas entertained a group of friends Wednesday at a wiener roast at the home of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Barthelmas, of Wayne township.

Games were enjoyed after the delightful lunch.

Among those present were: the Misses Marilyn Barthelmas, Daisy Boyer, Genevieve Boyer, Jean Campbell, Olive Cross, Mary Cross, Helen Dean, Evelyn Dowden, Elizabeth Downing, Ann Downing, Joan Easter, Margie Eetep, Gladys Fullen, Nancy Fullen, Clamaria Greene, Joan Hoff-

secretary's report and called the roll. Mrs. Ned Walker gave the treasurer's report. A committee comprised of Mrs. Hudson, Mrs. Harold Fee and Mrs. Thomas Wardell, Jr., was appointed to set the time and place of the Ladies' Aid picnic to be held in July.

Mrs. Stella Leist was in charge of Memorial services.

The program arranged by Mrs. Fee included readings by Mrs. Ruth Aldenderfer, Mrs. Leah Dewey and Miss Myrna Jean Wardell. A contest was won by Mrs. N. I. Mowery. The program closed with singing of "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Mrs. Frank Noggle was received as a new member. At the close of the afternoon, lunch was served by Mrs. Wardell, Mrs. Fee, Mrs. Leist, Mrs. Dewey and Mrs. Molly Rodgers.

Women's Association

Women's association of the Presbyterian church held its June meeting Friday in the social room of the church with 35 present for the afternoon. Mrs. George Bentley conducted the fine devotional service, including two hymns, the Scripture lesson and prayer. Mrs. Bentley also read a very appropriate poem, "Since the War", by Grace Noll Crowell.

Miss Florence Dunton, president, was in the chair for the business meeting and received the monthly reports. The association decided to donate $25 to $40 to the deacons' fund to assist any boy or girl of the church to attend a camping period at Camp Wildwood, north of Worthington, or the Summer Youth Conference at Wooster.

It was announced that Group A would have charge of the program for the September session, the association recessing for the Summer months. The programs of the association will be devoted to the business, missionary and social departments of the church.

Immediately after the close of session, Groups B and F, led respectively by Mrs. Will Mack and Mrs. Clark K. Hunsicker, held meetings.

PROCESSION TO MARK CORPUS CHRISTI FEAST

For the feast of Corpus Christi St. Joseph's Catholic church will hold a solemn procession following the 9:30 o'clock high mass which will be sung by the Rev. Edward Reidy.

The procession will be formed by an acolyte carrying the Crucifix with small girls immediately back of the crucifix bearer and the boys next in line. All persons in the congregation will form in line after the children when the choir will lead in the singing of "Pange Lingua Gloriosa." Following the procession, Benediction of the Most Blessed Sacrament will be given.

For the service the choir will sing the mass of St. Angela with "Ecce Vitoria" for the offertory. Sunday masses for the warm months will be at 7:30 and 9:30 o'clock.

PAGEANT TO BE PRESENTED FOR CHILDREN'S DAY

A Children's Day Pageant, entitled, "Who Bids", will be presented Sunday at 8 p. m. at the United Brethren church. In the pageant Life places a child on the auction block, the child herself choosing the highest bidder. The church and her singers help the child to make a wise decision.

The bidders are: Pleasure, Charlene Canter; Wealth, Patsy Johnson; Fame, Virginia Wise; Christian Service, Phyllis Hawkes. Each bidder has her own attendants who emphasize the value of each bid.

Other leading members of the cast are: Life, Marguerite Martin; the Child, Elaine Baker, and the Church, Marlene Martin. The public is invited to enjoy this unusual service.

BROTHERHOOD OUTING

The Men's Brotherhood of the First Methodist church will hold its June meeting Wednesday at the Ted Lewis Recreation park. Dinner will be served at 6:30 p. m. The Boy Scouts will be guests of the Brotherhood. Games of various kinds will be enjoyed. Reservations should be made by Sunday with Dan McClain, president of the Brotherhood.

Today's VICTORY GARDEN-GRAPH

Collards for "Greens" in Victory Garden

By DEAN HALLIDAY
Released by Central Press Association

COLLARDS are relatives of the cabbage family, as well as a variety of kale. The green leaves have a cabbage flavor but contain a higher vitamin content than does cabbage. Collards therefore are recommended for the Victory garden as a protective food.

Illustrated in the accompanying Garden-Graph is a young collard plant producing edible leaves in 45 days from the time of sowing the seed.

The true Georgia collard, illustrated, grows two to four feet high and produces large, succulent light green leaves on quite long stems. These leaves make delicious boiling "greens."

Collard seeds can be planted in a seed bed and transplanted when the young plants are about four inches high, or seed can be sown in the space where the plants are to be allowed to grow to maturity. If seed is sown in the garden proper then when the plants are well started they should be thinned to two or three feet apart in the row and cultivated in the same manner as cabbage.

FARM EXHIBIT

Bob Young's recent guest appearance on the Abbott and Costello airer developed into an agriculture exhibit. Bob's a neighbor rancher of Abbott's near the San Fernando Valley town of Encino, but they rarely see each other because both are busy with radio and motion pictures in town. So Bob took the opportunity as guest star to prove to Bud how excellent the Young alfalfa hay crop is this year. He came in for rehearsal bearing a bunch of long alfalfa stalks!

BRIEF RADIO NOTES

Mickey Rooney is expected to make his debut as a radio dramatic actor in a forthcoming "suspense" airdrama. Rooney's previous radio appearances have always found him in a light juvenile role similar to those he portrays in his "Andy Hardy" flicker series.

18--Slam Bidding

THERE are many ways of reaching a bid of Little Slam or Grand Slam when your side is lucky enough to have been dealt the cards which can make one. On the rarest of occasions--you may not see this happen in years of play--some one player may get a holding so freakish that he is justified in making an immediate bid of six-odd or even seven-odd, an undertaking to score 12 or 13 tricks respectively.

Most slams come when the strength is pretty well divided between the two partners. In such cases, it is possible to arrive at slam contracts in any of several different ways. Or perhaps it would be better to say there are several ways to save you from bidding slams which cannot be made. To make a slam necessitates two main factors--total trick-taking ability to produce the 12 or 13 tricks for which you contract, and ability to keep the opponents from taking the setting trick or tricks before you get started on your side's tricks.

Between you and your partner, you may have the cards with which your side could take six tricks in spades, five in hearts and three in diamonds--a total of 14. But if you each have two little clubs, the opponents may be able to score two tricks in that suit before you get under way. Hence, you lack the necessary "controls," as many players call them.

Bearing in mind this factor, you may find some deals on which your side can bid to slam naturally. The bidding back and forth may go: 1-Spade, 3-Spades; 6-Spades. Or 1-Heart, 3-Diamonds; 4-Diamonds, 6-Diamonds Or 1-Heart, 2-No Trumps; 3-Hearts, 5-Hearts; 6-Hearts.

Many good players stick to natural bidding like that to reach slams. Some prefer to indulge at times in what is called cue-bidding, which means the showing of location of aces or blank suits which can be ruffed. Suppose the bidding gets under way like this: 1-Spade, 3-Spades; 4-Diamonds. The suit, spades, having been agreed upon, the first bidder is showing first-round control of diamonds with an ace or blank and wants his partner to show any first-round control. If he responds with 5-Clubs, thereby indicating ability to take the first trick in clubs, he denies first-round control of the more-easily-shown heart ace or blank. That may be just what the first man fears, or just what he wants to hear. He can then bid slam or sign off at five.

Another conventional slam signal is a bid of an opponent's suit after you have heard a bid by your partner. In that situation it indicates ability to take the first trick in the hostile suit and a fit with your partner's, with enough strength to make slam seem likely.

Some players like what is called the "Blackwood convention." After either partner has bid a suit, a call of 4-No Trumps is the "Blackwood" slam signal, artificially asking about your partner's aces. He replies artificially, 5-Clubs, meaning he has none; 5-Diamonds, 1; 5-Hearts, 2; 5-Spades, 3; 5-No Trumps, all four. Following response to the 4-No Trumps, a bid of 5-No Trumps asks about the kings, which are shown by the same general methods, 6-Clubs denying any; 6-Hearts, 2; 6-Spades, 3; 6-No Trumps, 4. If used carefully, when enough total playing tricks are in sight, this device to locate controls can help you reach makable slams and avoid non-makable ones. But be sure enough playing tricks are in sight if you use it, and while you are a beginner it may be best not to monkey with it at all.

of Inter-American affairs, tuned in to a recent "Blondie" airing titled "Blondie Learns Spanish," he liked the skit so well that he has made arrangements to have the script done in Spanish and short-waved to Latin-American countries.

Wants to get Jimmy Durante into the act. The Schnozz and Garry Moore Friday nights, is now being sought by Richard Himber and Orson Welles for their forthcoming musical and magical comedy, "Abracadabra."

Who said it's a woman's world? The all-woman technical and production staff of the "Date With Judy" airer was invaded by a member of the masculine gender this week when Roy Erwin, brother of Trudy Erwin, vocalist, took over the sound effects section replacing Sound-Woman Clara Groves.

The longest audition session in the history of "Star Playhouse" airshow marked the casting this week of the drama, "Marked Woman," starring Screen Luminary Gail Patrick, which will run for 20 episodes. Nearly six hours of steady auditioning was required by Producer Les Mitchell to hear the seventy-one candidates for the supporting roles!

RED BIRDS WIN TIGHT CONTEST WITH K. C. BLUES

By International News Service
Milwaukee today maintained its enormous lead in the American Association standings, holding the top spot with 36 wins and 11 losses, although yesterday's game with Toledo on Brewer grounds was postponed because of rain.

Columbus in second place with 27 wins and 17 losses defeated the Kansas City Blues by the tight score of 2 to 1. The game turned into a pitching duel between Johnny Podgajny and Don Johnson, both right handers.

The Birds gained the winning margin in the second frame. It was threatened however in later innings but Podgajny seemed to know the right combination to hold the home teamers in check. The Blues made their only tally in the sixth.

St. Paul and the Louisville Colonels broke even in the double-header played at the Minnesota city. The Saints behind the seventh hurling of Otho Nitcholas, put the first game on ice to the tune of 4 to 2 but lost in the nightcap 5 to 1.

The Indianapolis Indians snapped a nine-game losing streak to defeat Minneapolis 3 to 2, behind superlative hurling by John Hutchings. He allowed only five hits and struck out eight. The Millers scored only in the fifth frame when Jack Aragon hit a homer off Hutchings with one man on base. Hugh Poland knocked a home run for the visitors.

AN ELUSIVE PUP

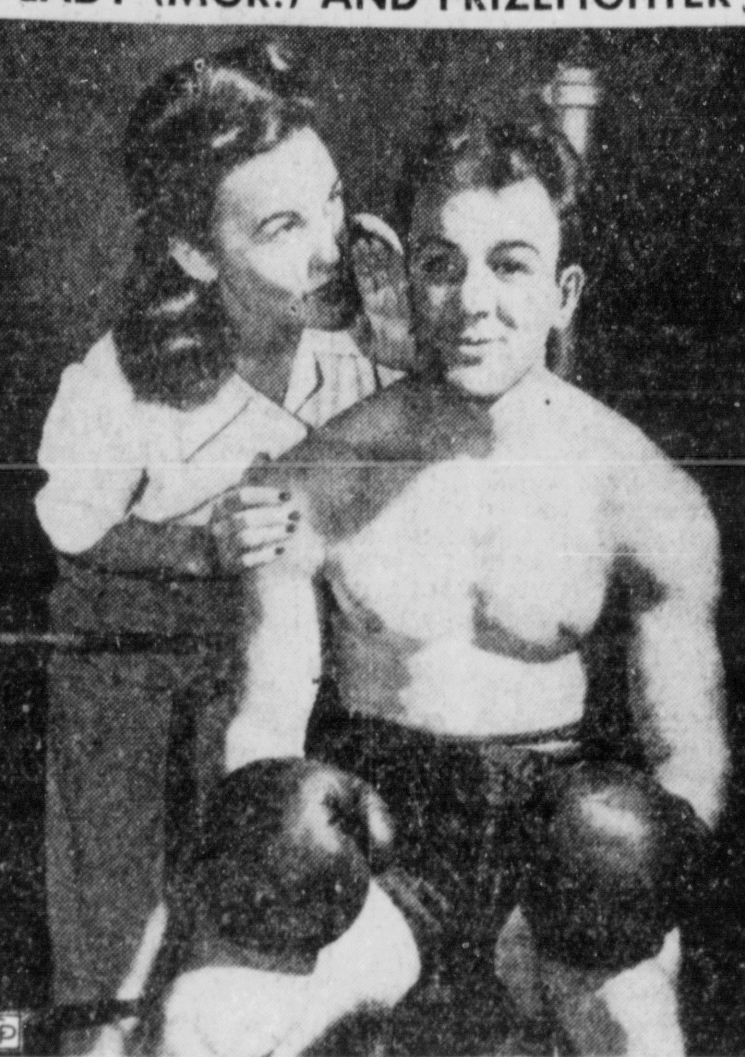

McKEESPORT, Pa. — A husky police lieutenant and a patrolman, struggling to extricate a whining puppy from a sewer drop so that residents in the neighborhood could get some sleep, finally gave up and called out the street department. When a truck and crew arrived at the spot, armed with tools, the puppy was gone. A passerby had rescued the dog and gone on his way.

Cleveland Indians In Annual Revolt, But Lou Predicted To Be Victor

NEW YORK, June 10.—Besides possessing the baseball manager's usual knowledge of baseball, the man who pilots the Cleveland Indians also must be a diplomat, a tough guy, and extremely lucky. With these attributes he generally might manage to reach mid-season before finding himself involved in a rebellion. This has been going on so long that the customers figure they should get a scalping bee on the Indian bench as an extra added attraction every time they buy a ticket into the park.

When Ossie Vitt left there as big chief there was scarcely a hair left on his bowed old head, subjected so often to the Tribe's tommy-hawks that it was full of ridges and ravines. During his tenure everything would be quiet for a while on the bench, then there would be a war-whoop followed by the blood-curdling yells of all the Indians and then a tangle of writhing bodies. Old Ossie would crawl out of the pack holding himself in several spots, but still in one piece until that day when they finally got him.

They didn't burn him at the stake, merely got him fired out of there and Lou Boudreau, the papoose manager, now is getting much the same treatment. Only yesterday he announced that Pitcher Vernon Kennedy would be reinstated over the week-end after his suspension for conduct detrimental to the team. There has been some growling among other Indians from time to time, and war whoops can be expected at any time.

It won't be so easy to get Boudreau fired, if indeed, this is possible at all. He stands in very good with Alva Bradley, the head medicine man, who by this time is beginning to wonder if all managers can possibly be as bad as they are painted by the players. More likely some of the gents fomenting trouble will be dispatched thither before Bradley lets Boudreau go, for the current manager is a young man of many fine qualities, including the ability to play a considerable amount of shortstop.

Any way it can be safely said now that the baseball season is officially under way. The Indians are enjoying their annual revolt.

The darling of the two-buck betters and those with the big coarse noses as well—has been grounded for 10 days. Bobby Perma, the curly-haired youngster who set records in Florida with his riding last winter, drew the punishment yesterday for his ride aboard Nebraska, or rather the start of his ride.

On leaving the starting gate Nebraska cut across the field and Perma immediately was hailed before the officials when the race was completed. Beginning Monday he will be out of the saddle for 10 days, much to the sorrow of a number of persons who have quit betting horses and started betting Perma.

They would back him if he was riding a Billy goat against Man O' War, and when the hollering starts as the horses come down the stretch they do not yell for this beetle or that one. It's always "Come on, Bobby, you can do it boy." He does do it an amazing number of times.

ORGANIZATION OF BOY LEAGUE, AIM OF MEETING

A meeting will be held on the lawn of the United Brethren church, East Main street, Tuesday, at 1:30 p. m. to organize ball teams for boys of the city between the ages of 8 and 16. This project is being sponsored by the Harper Bible class and the Rev. J. E. Huston, pastor of the church, to provide recreation for the boys who are not included in the other leagues of the city.

Any boy in Circleville who wishes to play ball is invited to attend the meeting. Members of the class and the Rev. Mr. Huston hope to have several teams.

M'LISH HURLS BUMS TO WIN OVER BRAVES

Pirates And Cubs Battle 11 Innings And Rain Prevents Decision

NEW YORK, June 10.—The Brooklyn Dodgers must get rid of four men before the 25-player limit goes into effect Thursday midnight, but there is a select circle in the Brooklyn clubhouse which, currently, has no fears for the immediate future.

Calvin Coolidge McLish, the young pitcher, has nothing to worry about, nor has Ed Stanky, newly inserted into the infield line-up. Certainly outfielder Dixie Walker, hitting at a clip of .453, need not be apprehensive of the coming days. But the situation was not always thus. Stanky came to the Dodgers as a stop-gap, although a badly needed one, and his presence for the rest of the season was not assured until he became so obviously a boon to the listless infield play seen in Brooklyn.

McLish first appeared as the sacrificial lamb for the world champion St. Louis Cardinals, who batted him out of the box in his first professional debut. Walker, 33-year-old veteran tabbed for a one-way ticket out of Ruckey's ken in normal times, now is a tower of strength in comparison to most of his teammates.

Both McLish and Walker strengthened their case in Ebbets field last night when McLish pitched brilliant five-hit ball in hurling the Dodgers to a 3 to 2 triumph over the Boston Braves and Walker came up with a sparkling double to set the stage for the winning run in the ninth inning.

Dixie doubled off the score-board in the last-minute drive. Thereafter when Luis Olmo walked, Dixie came home under Mickey Owen's blooper into short left field. It was perfect collaboration between Walker and McLish, who pitched himself out of trouble twice.

For 11 innings the Pittsburgh Pirates and the Chicago Cubs struggled vainly to reach a decision but the game was called on account of rain, with the score tied 3-3.

County Bond Salesmen Poised for Start of Campaign Monday

HEAVY BUYING NECESSARY TO MEET BIG QUOTA

Clark Will Cites Fact That Heavy Buying May Hurt But Will Not Kill

Pickaway county's War Bond selling organization Saturday was poised for the opening of the Fifth War Bond campaign. Early Monday morning solicitors will start work and before close of the campaign will interview most residents of the county.

"Salesmen should not be required for such an undertaking as this," said Clark Will, county drive director. "Every citizen knows the need for money to carry the war to a successful conclusion. No one should require being sold."

Mr. Will declared that all residents of the county should determine the maximum amount of money they can put into War Bonds and should make the purchases as early as possible. "Do not wait for a solicitor," Mr. Will advised. "Make your purchase as quickly as possible."

The county's quota for the current campaign is the largest of the war, which means citizens must make heavier purchases than in the past.

Everywhere in the county solicitors are ready to call attention to the fact that while heavy purchases of bonds may hurt at this time they at least are not fatal, will not cost sight, an arm or leg, mentality or destroy all hope for a happy future. "Money is nothing in comparison with what the men in uniform are paying for victory," Mr. Will said. "And the so-called hardship of sacrificing in order to buy more heavily than at first contemplated is absolutely nothing in comparison with the hardships of the fighting men."

Circleville's Junior Chamber of Commerce is to play an important role in the War Bond campaign. Under the leadership of Don Hinkle the Jaycees will conduct the sales campaign in the city district east of Court street and south of Main.

W. G. Hamilton, chairman of zone one which lies north of Main street and west of Court street has chosen Harry Moore, Warren Baker and Leslie May as captains of his group who will be assisted by H. B. Colwell, H. W. Plum, Gilbert Starkey, H. O. Grant, Frank Barnhill, Laura M. King, Roscoe Warren, Fred Donnelly, Charles L. Mack and S. M. Cryder.

Captain Leonard Snodgrass of the first team in zone three will be assisted by Frank Marion, Orsen Patrick, Howard McKee, Frank Wantz, Wilson Wood, Harold Baughman. Team number two with Harry Graef captain is composed of Elliot White, Harold Gilson, Lewis Cook, Leon Gordon, Jack Joy, LaVerne Scranton.

Team number three, Jud Lanman, captain, with John Moore, Roger May, Joseph W. Adkins, Wendell Turner, Forrest Storts. Fourth team is captained by Maxwell Lee and is composed of Charles Glitt, Robert Elsea, Glenn Weiler, Linden Baughman, Marvin Leist, Robert Lawrence and Gerald Miller. The fifth team with Boyd Stout as captain has listed Harry Hosier, Jr., Virgil Cress, George Barnes, Henry Helweggen. Team number six is composed of Hal Dean, captain, Kenneth Dillman, Robert Norpoth, Ren Mumaw and M. A. Yates.

The fourth zone lies south of Main street and west of Court street and Lawrence Johnson, chairman, has not named his captains but his solicitors will be J. P. Noeher, Robert Armstrong, Emerson Martin, John P. Moore, Theodore Kirkendall, Mrs. Tom Lake, A. L. Wilder, W. C. Kochheiser, Dan McClain, Barton Deming, William Cady, Ray P. Reid, Joseph Brink and Alice Ada May.

The following is a breakdown of the Pickaway county quota in districts as announced by Clark Will, War Finance committee chairman, Friday: Circleville, $332,000; Circleville township, $41,328; Washington, $48,708; Wayne, $51,660; Pickaway, $112,176; Saltcreek, $73,800; Ashville, $54,612; Harrison township, $72,324; Madison, $53,146; Walnut, $92,988; Commercial Point, $76,752; Darby township, $69,372; Muhlenberg, $45,756; New Holland, $19,188; Perry township, $73,800; Monroe, $82,656; Williamsport, $14,760; Deer creek township, $70,848; Jackson, $89,996.

sinkings at that time, it was impossible to ship American troops across the Atlantic in enough numbers to make up 70 percent of an invasion army.

Churchill at that time wanted to invade the Balkans. General Marshall favored a second front in Western Europe. So, instead, they compromised on Italy which, except for Sicily and the extreme south, nobody really wanted to invade.

Once again, the Russians were desperately disappointed, and rumors came out of Moscow—perhaps inspired in order to influence us—that Russia might withdraw from the war.

NO DECISION AT QUEBEC
Highly expectant communiques were issued after each conference, so that the world got the impression that the second front was imminent. However, judging by their military movements, the Germans were not much concerned over these communiques, and probably knew that, even after the Quebec conference in the Summer of 1943, Churchill and Roosevelt still were not able to agree on the second front.

At Quebec, the United States still had not had time to ship sufficient troops overseas to supply a 70-30 ratio, and Churchill, never enthusiastic about a cross-Channel operation no matter what the ratio, still wanted to penetrate the Balkans.

It had been hoped that Stalin would join Churchill and Roosevelt at Quebec or some place in Northern Canada. But he turned the invitation down. And once again, there was no decision on the second front. U. S. naval leaders, by this time, demanded and secured an agreement whereby we would go ahead faster in the Pacific.

TEHERAN CONFERENCE
Next came the Teheran Conference. Only then was an agreement reached that the British and American forces should attack Germany across the Channel while Russia hit her from the East.

The agreement did not come too easily, however, even at Teheran. Churchill first proposed his old hunting-ground, the Balkans; then a Southern European operation; then an all-out and continued air-pounding of Germany which he thought would bring Hitler to his knees. Stalin, however, turned thumbs down on all three unless accompanied by a cross-Channel operation.

Finally, an agreement was signed that the invasion should start no later than a certain week. Stalin gave certain promises in return, most of which cannot yet be revealed.

Later when Churchill recovered from his illness, he made certain proposals for modifying the second front plan, confiding to friends that he had not been well at Teheran. However, except for a possible slight delay, there never was any important modification of the basic Teheran plan.

KINGSTON BOY SCOUTS PLAN SALVAGE DRIVE

Boy Scout troop No. 5 of Kingston will conduct a scrap drive Wednesday, starting at 6 o'clock in the evening. Scrap metal of all kinds will be collected along with scrap paper, magazines and rags.

In drives conducted in the past loose papers and magazines have been accepted, but because of the difficulty of handling and disposing of them in this condition the Scouts urge all citizens to securely tie the both papers and magazines or put them in containers. The Scouts have been given orders to accept no papers or magazines unless they are tied or in containers. They also ask that papers and magazines be separated. E. V. Graves is the scoutmaster.

"Buffalo Bill" was directed by William A. Wellman and produced by Harry A. Sherman.

NEWS OF OUR MEN and WOMEN IN UNIFORM

Corporal Nolan L. Sines and his bride of two months, are spending a few days with his father, Harry Sines, and family of near Ashville. They will return to South Carolina for a few days' visit with Mrs. Sines' relatives before returning to Camp Gordon, Ga.

Following a recent review ceremony of an Engineer Aviation Regiment stationed in England, 43 Negro soldiers were awarded the Good Conduct Ribbons by Lieutenant Colonel Houghton R. Hallock of Berkeley, Cal., commanding officer of the regiment.

For many of them it was the first anniversary of their arrival in England. The men are members of a battalion commanded by Major Eugene L. Miller, of Tulsa, Okla.

Col. Hallock complimented the troops on their performance. They have helped construct two giant airdromes, have done repair work on others and have had the job of maintaining numerous Army Air Force installations.

Among those receiving ribbons were the following: Sergeant Russell D. Weaver, Circleville Route 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Weaver, and Corporal Leonard Newman, son of Mrs. Ora Jefferson, of Chillicothe.

Technical Sergeant Richard W. Harman, top turret gunner on the Flying Fortress, "Troublemaker", has been awarded the third Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal. The presentation was made by his group commander, Colonel Hunter Harris, Jr., at an Eighth AAF Base in England. Sgt. Harman, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Harman, 160 West Mound street, was a student at the University of Pittsburgh Law School, prior to entering the AAF in September, 1942. He received his B. A. from the University of Pittsburgh in 1941. The citation read, "For exceptionally meritorious achievement, while participating in five separate bomber combat missions over enemy occupied Continental Europe. The courage, coolness and skill displayed by Sgt. Harman upon these occasions reflect great credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States."

Flight Officer Edwin E. Swayzer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Swayzer of Ashville and husband of Mrs. Ruth E. Sawyer of Lockbourne, has reported to the AAF Redistribution Station No. 1, at Atlantic City, N. J., after a visit with his parents and wife. He recently returned after considerable service overseas in the Italian war zone.

While overseas, F. O. Swayzer engaged in 54 combat missions, and wears the Air Medal. He will be examined and interviewed

LARRY Parks and Lynn Merrick head an outstanding array of new screen faces in the musical film, "Stars On Parade," at the Cliftona theatre Sunday and Monday. This new talent, discovered after a coast-to-coast search of radio, night clubs and vaudeville, includes Danny O'Neil, Frank and Jean Hubert, the Chords, the King Cole Trio and the Ben Carter Choir. "No Time For Love," starring Claudette Colbert and Fred MacMurray completes an unusually attractive double feature program.

ASHVILLE

Nolan E. Murphy, formerly the Ashville commercial teacher and now employed in a similar capacity at Westerville, was a business visitor in Ashville Friday.

Mrs. Shirley Cooper, who underwent a tonsillectomy Monday at Grant hospital, returned home Friday. Mrs. Cooper expects to enter Ohio State university Monday for some advanced mathematical training.

Charles W. Nicholson is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hess of near Canal Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton E. Mahaffey left Thursday for an extended visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Lt. and Mrs. W. D. Snyder. Mr. Mahaffey has withdrawn his application for the superintendency of the Ashville schools because of his health.

Mr. and Mrs. Shadel Saunders were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pettibone Thursday. Mr. Saunders, who formerly coached at New Holland, is basketball coach at Central high school in Columbus.

James Woodworth has returned home from a visit with his grandparents at Wapontetka.

Miss Flora Peters returned to Centerburg Thursday after spending a few days visiting her brother, Horace Peters and Mrs. Laura Courtright.

Among local young people who have recently secured employment are Miss Ada Lou Beckett, who is a bookkeeper at the Goddard Shoe Co., in Columbus, Miss Norma Jean Hines who is working at the Greyhound Bus Station in Columbus, and Miss Virginia McDowell who is employed at the Lockbourne Air Base.

The Girl Scouts met for the second time Wednesday. Several girls are already enrolled.

Orlan Hines' band is planning to sponsor a public dance at the Community Park on Friday, June 16.

FARM EXHIBIT

Bob Young's recent guest appearance on the Abbott and Costello airer developed into an agriculture exhibit. Bob's a neighbor rancher of Abbott's near the San Fernando Valley town of Encino, but they rarely see each other because both are busy with radio and motion pictures in town. So Bob took the opportunity as guest star to prove to Bud how excellent the Young alfalfa hay crop is this year. He came in for rehearsal bearing a bunch of long alfalfa stalks!

BRIEF RADIO NOTES

Mickey Rooney is expected to make his debut as a radio dramatic actor in a forthcoming "suspense" air drama. Rooney's previous radio appearances have always found him in a light juvenile role similar to those he portrays in his "Andy Hardy" flicker series.

Kay Lorraine, singing graduate of "Basin Street," who returns as a guest on the program Sunday, gets the honor of being the first guest on the new "Screen Test" program which opens Monday.

When Jack Runyon, radio chief in Hollywood for the Coordinator of Inter-American affairs, tuned in to a recent "Blondie" airing titled "Blondie Learns Spanish," he liked the skit so well that he has made arrangements to have the script done in Spanish and short-waved to Latin-American countries.

Plans to get Jimmy Durante into the act. The Schnozz airer starring Jimmy Durante and Mary Moore Friday nights, is now being sought by Richard Himber and Orson Welles for their forthcoming musical and magical comedy, "Abracadabra."

Who said it's a woman's world? The all-woman technical and production staff of the "Date With Judy" airer was invaded by a member of the masculine gender this week when Roy Erwin, brother of Trudy Erwin, vocalist, took over the sound effects section replacing Sound-Woman Clara Groves.

The longest audition session in the history of "Star Playhouse" airshow marked the casting this week of the drama, "Marked Woman," starring Screen Luminary Gail Patrick, which will run for 20 episodes. Nearly six hours of steady auditioning was required by Producer Les Mitchell to hear the seventy-one candidates for the supporting roles!

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

"The Authority on Authorities"

LEARN BRIDGE FAST
18—Slam Bidding
THERE ARE many ways of reaching a bid of Little Slam or Grand Slam when your side is lucky enough to have been dealt the cards which can make one. On the rarest of occasions—you may not see this happen in years of play—some one player may get a holding so freakish that he is justified in making an immediate bid of six-odd or even seven-odd, an undertaking to score 12 or 13 tricks respectively.

Most slams come when the strength is pretty well divided between the two partners. In such cases, it is possible to arrive at slam contracts in any of several different ways. Or perhaps it would be better to say there are several ways to save you from bidding slams which cannot be made. To make a slam necessitates two main factors—total trick-taking ability to produce the 12 or 13 tricks for which you contract, and ability to keep the opponents from taking the setting trick or tricks before you get started on your side's tricks.

Between you and your partner, you may have the cards with which your side could take six tricks in spades, five in hearts and three in diamonds—a total of 14. But if you each have two little clubs, the opponents may be able to score two tricks in that suit before you get under way. Hence, you lack the necessary "controls," as many players call them.

Bearing in mind this factor, you may find some deals on which your side can bid to slam naturally. The bidding back and forth may go: 1-Spade, 3-Spades; 6-Spades. Or 1-Heart, 3-Diamonds; 4-Diamonds, 6-Diamonds. Or 1-Heart, 2-No Trumps; 3-Hearts, 5-Hearts; 6-Hearts.

Many good players stick to natural bidding like that to reach slams. Some prefer to indulge at times in what is called cue-bidding, which means the showing of location of aces or blank suits which can be ruffed. Suppose the bidding gets under way like this: 1-Spade, 3-Spades; 4-Diamonds. The suit, spades, having been agreed upon, the first bidder is showing first-round control of diamonds with an ace or blank and wants 'his partner to show any first-round control. If he responds with 5-Clubs, thereby indicating ability to take the first trick in clubs, he denies first-round control of the more-easily-shown heart ace or blank. That may be just what he wants to hear. He can then bid slam or sign off at five.

Another conventional slam signal is a bid of an opponent's suit after you have heard a bid by your partner. In that situation it indicates ability to take the first trick in the hostile suit and a fit with your partner's, with enough strength to make slam seem likely.

Some players like what is called the "Blackwood convention." After either partner has bid a suit, a call of 4-No Trumps is the "Blackwood" slam signal, artificially asking about your partner's aces. He replies artificially, 5-Clubs, meaning he has none; 6-Diamonds, 1; 5-Hearts, 2; 5-Spades, 3; 5-No Trumps, all four. Following response to the 4-No Trumps, a bid of 5-No Trumps asks about the kings, which are shown by the same general methods, 6-Clubs denying any; 6-Hearts, 2; 6-Spades, 3; 6-No Trumps, 4. If used carefully, when enough total playing tricks are in sight, this device to locate controls can help you reach makable slams and avoid non-makable ones. But be sure enough playing tricks are in sight if you use it, and while you are a beginner it may be best not to monkey with it at all.

OFFICIALLY OPENS MONDAY EVENING OF SONG TO BE HONORED GUEST OF CITY

SOFT BALL GAME AT 7 p. m.

CIRCLEVILLE'S JAYCEES

— VS —

KAHN GIRLS (Columbus)

COMING FOR PARK OPENING

TED LEWIS

"High Hatted Tragedian of Song"

"IS EVERYBODY HAPPY?"

TED, we are all mighty happy to have you with us for the formal opening of our municipal park, the public playground named after you and which you helped make possible with another of your generous gifts to worthy local undertakings.

The pride in your home town that you have exhibited through your many years of theatrical life is only equalled by our pride in you as our Number One citizen. Few other men in your position would have carried through the long years the interest and attachment you have for the community we proudly call home.

We recall you as a kid when Prof. Oscar Ameringer fired you from his boys' band for pepping up the "Poet and Peasant," as the clarinet player in E. L. Peters' nickel-odeon, when you passed handbills, sold peanuts, ushered and led an Uncle Tom's Cabin bloodhound in a Main street parade.

Then when you put together a jazzy clarinet, a moth-eaten high hat and sentimental song-talk and strutted on the big time we rejoiced over the success of a home town boy. That was a long time ago and the spotlight has since dimmed for most of your contemporaries.

You are quoted as saying, "Sometimes I lie awake nights and wonder how I do it. I get by with murder." But your form of murder always has been liked in America and always will be liked. We are particularly fond of it around here.

We remember your early discouraging stage experiences and your subsequent rise to a fame that has never lessened. We recall your first break when you went to Rector's as a clarinetist in Earl Fuller's band and remained for two years. We know of your travels in every state in the Union, of four professional trips abroad, of your appearances before seven Presidents, the king of England and countless members of royalty. We were pleased by your great hit in London. We know and hum the songs you have made famous.

We were proud right along with you when in July of 1911 you made your 50,000th appearance as a popular public entertainer. We have seen you in pictures and have heard you on the radio. We play your records on our phonographs.

You have declared that being a musician does not count and believe that your success is due to showmanship. No one disputes that you are a great showman, the best in your line, but hereabouts we also believe that your success is due to your interest in humanity, your simplicity of manner, your never ending effort to bring just a little more happiness into the world.

Ted, we know that you have never forgotten less fortunate men, that you have given freely of your profits to worthy causes regardless of race, color or creed. We are not proud of you just because of the name you have made for yourself in the world, but because you are Ted Lewis, the one-time Theodore Leopold Friedman, of Circleville.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUND and RECREATION CENTER

Equipment now installed at Ted Lewis park makes it an attractive playground and recreation center. It is open to the public and all citizens are urged to take advantage of the property not only on the opening day of the season, but throughout the Summer as well. Children and adults have access to—

- Fine Picnic Grounds
- Picnic Tables
- Outdoor Furnaces
- City Water Supply
- Hard Ball Diamond
- Soft Ball Diamond
- Football Field
- Basketball Court
- Horseshoe Pitching Courts
- Badminton Court
- Croquet Courses
- Safe, Modern Swings
- Teeter Totters
- Sand Boxes for Children
- Toilet Facilities

Baseballs and bats, footballs and basketballs may be used gratis by youths on request to the park supervisor who is present at all times the park is open to the public.

The Kahn team is ranked high by the American Softball Association and is generally recognized as one of the best girl aggregations in the country.

Little Sara Willoughby is on first base. In the opinion of many sports writers she is absolutely tops among girls at this position. Last year she accepted 65 chances before making an error.

Margie (Pat) Ryan, who last year headed the Columbus Girls Class A league in fielding and hitting, appears at second. She is captain.

Helen (Red) Wagner is at shortstop and her playing is comparable to that of any man.

Joan Chapman is at third, playing her first year and recognized as a coming great.

Elizabeth and Margaret Merrick, twin sisters, play left and center field respectively. Margaret last year equalled the world record for circling the bases in 10¼ seconds. She also is capable of playing any position on the team.

Mildred Branch, known for her rifle-like arm, is in right field. She has thrown many a runner out at the plate this season and last.

Mary Geddes and "Ginny" James are the mound performers and are among the very best. The receiver has not yet been decided.

In the last two years the Kahn girls have won 70 games and lost 12. They have been Columbus and district champions for the last four years. Last year they were state finalists, but were defeated by Dayton 7 to 4. This year, the Kahns opened the season with the same Dayton team and won by a count of 5 to 0.

The Circleville Jaycees, composed of prominent young business men of the city, also is a distinguished aggregation. As a member of the city softball league it has yet to win a game, although it has one victory by virtue of a forfeit. "Everyone else has beaten us at least once, but we just can not let girls do it," a spokesman for the organization declared today. The team is engaged in what it calls practice and promises to be in top form for the clash with the Kahns.

County Bond Salesmen Poised for Start of Campaign Monday

HEAVY BUYING NECESSARY TO MEET BIG QUOTA

Clark Will Cites Fact That Heavy Buying May Hurt But Will Not Kill

Pickaway county's War Bond selling organization Saturday was poised for the opening of the Fifth War Bond campaign. Early Monday morning solicitors will start work and before close of the campaign will interview most residents of the county.

"Salesmen should not be required for such an undertaking as this," said Clark Will, county drive director. "Every citizen knows the need for money to carry the war to a successful conclusion. No one should require being sold."

Mr. Will declared that all residents of the county should determine the maximum amount of money they can put into War Bonds and should make the purchases as early as possible. "Do not wait for a solicitor," Mr. Will advised. "Make your purchase as quickly as possible."

The county's quota for the current campaign is the largest of the war, which means citizens must make heavier purchases than in the past.

Everywhere in the county solicitors are ready to call attention to the fact that while heavy purchases of bonds may hurt at this time they at least are not fatal, will not cost sight, an arm or leg, mentality or destroy all hope for a happy future. "Money is nothing in comparison with what the men in uniform are paying for victory," Mr. Will said. "And the so-called hardship of sacrificing in order to buy more heavily than at first contemplated is absolutely nothing in comparison with the hardships of the fighting men."

Circleville's Junior Chamber of Commerce is to play an important role in the War Bond campaign. Under the leadership of Don Hinkle the Jaycees will conduct the sales campaign in the city district east of Court street and south of Main.

W. G. Hamilton, chairman of zone one which lies north of Main street and west of Court street has chosen Harry Moore, Warren Baker and Leslie May as captains of his group who will be assisted by H. B. Colwell, H. W. Plum, Gilbert Starkey, H. O. Grant, Frank Barnhill, Laura M. King, Roscoe Warren, Fred Donnelly, Charles L. Mack and S. M. Cryder.

Captain Leonard Snodgrass of the first team in zone three will be assisted by Frank Marion, Orsen Patrick, Howard McKee, Frank Wantz, Wilson Wood, Harold Baughman. Team number two with Harry Graef captain is composed of Elliot White, Harold Clifton, Lewis Cook, Leon Gordon, Jack Joy, LaVerne Scranon.

Team number three, Jud Lanman, captain, with John Moore, Roger May, Joseph W. Adkins, Wendell Turner, Forrest Storts. Fourth team is captained by Maxwell Lee and is composed of Charles Glitt, Robert Elise, Glenn Weiler, Linden Baughman, Marvin Leist, Robert Lawrence and Gerald Miller. The fifth team with Boyd Stout as captain has listed Harry Howler, Jr., Virgil Cress, George Barnes, Henry Helwigson. Team number six is composed of Hal Dean, captain, Kenneth Dillman, Robert Norpeth, Ren Mumaw and M. A. Yates.

The fourth zone lies south of Main street and west of Court street and Lawrence Johnson, chairman, has not named his captains but his solicitors will be J. P. Noecker, Robert Armstrong, Emerson Martin, John P. Moore, Theodore Kirkendall, Mrs. Tom Lake, A. L. Wilder, W. C. Koehneer, Dan McClain, Barton Denning, William Cady, Ray P. Reid, Joseph Brink and Alice Ada May.

The following is a breakdown of the Pickaway county quota in districts as announced by Clark Will, War Finance committee chairman, Friday: Circleville, $332,600; Circleville township, $41,528; Washington, $48,708; Wayne, $51,660; Pickaway, $112,176; Saltcreek, $73,800; Ashville, $54,612; Harrison township, $72,324; Madison, $53,146; Walnut, $52,958; Commercial Point, $76,752; Darby township, $69,372; Muhlenberg, $45,756; New Holland, $19,188; Perry township, $73,800; Monroe, $82,656; Williamsport, $14,760; Decree township, $70,848; Jackson, $80,096.

sinkings at that time, it was impossible to ship American troops across the Atlantic in enough numbers to make up 70 percent of an invasion army.

Churchill at that time wanted to invade the Balkans. General Marshall favored a second front in Western Europe. So, instead, they compromised on Italy which, except for Sicily and the extreme south, nobody really wanted to invade.

Once again, the Russians were desperately disappointed, and rumors came out of Moscow—perhaps inspired in order to influence us—that Russia might withdraw from the war.

NO DECISION AT QUEBEC

Highly expectant communiques were issued after each conference, so that the world got the impression that the second front was imminent. However, judging by their military movements, the Germans were not much concerned over these communiques, and probably knew that, even after the Quebec conference in the Summer of 1943, Churchill and Roosevelt still were not able to agree on the second front.

At Quebec, the United States still had not had time to ship sufficient troops overseas to supply a 70-30 ratio, and Churchill, never enthusiastic about a cross-Channel operation no matter what the ratio, still wanted to penetrate the Balkans.

It had been hoped that Stalin would join Churchill and Roosevelt at Quebec or some place in Northern Canada. But he turned the invitation down. And once again, there was no decision on the second front. U. S. naval leaders, by this time, demanded and secured an agreement whereby we would go ahead faster in the Pacific.

TEHERAN CONFERENCE

Next came the Teheran Conference. Only then was an agreement reached that the British and American forces should attack Germany across the Channel while Russia hit her from the East.

The agreement did not come too easily, however, even at Teheran. Churchill first proposed his old hunting-ground, the Balkans; then a Southern European operation; then an all-out and continued air-pounding of Germany which he thought would bring Hitler to his knees. Stalin, however, turned thumbs down on all three unless accompanied by a cross-Channel operation.

Finally, an agreement was signed that the invasion should start no later than a certain week. Stalin gave certain promises in return, most of which cannot yet be revealed. Later when Churchill recovered from his illness, he made certain proposals for modifying the second front plan, confiding to friends that he had not been well at Teheran. However, except for a possible slight delay, there never was any important modification of the basic Teheran plan.

KINGSTON BOY SCOUTS PLAN SALVAGE DRIVE

Boy Scout troop No. 5 of Kingston will conduct a scrap drive Wednesday, starting at 6 o'clock in the evening. Scrap metal of all kinds will be collected along with scrap paper, magazines and rags.

In drives conducted in the past loose papers and magazines have been accepted, but because of the difficulty of handling and disposing of them in this condition the Scouts urge all citizens to securely tie both papers and magazines or put them in containers. The Scouts have been given orders to accept no papers or magazines unless they are tied or in containers. They also ask that papers and magazines be separated. E. V. Graves is the scoutmaster.

Days Of Old West

MAUREEN O'Hara, Joel McCrea and Linda Darnell form the romantic triangle in "Buffalo Bill," thrill-swept Technicolor hit which opens Sunday at the Grand theatre for a three day run. The colorful and exciting saga of the life of America's greatest frontiersman hero features Thomas Mitchell, Edgar Buchanan and Anthony Quinn in its brilliant cast. "Buffalo Bill" was directed by William A. Wellman and produced by Harry A. Sherman.

NEWS OF OUR MEN and WOMEN IN UNIFORM

Corporal Nolan L. Sines and his bride of two months, are spending a few days with his father, Harry Sines, and family of near Ashville. They will return to South Carolina for a few days' visit with Mrs. Sines' relatives before returning to Camp Gordon, Ga.

Following a recent review ceremony of an Engineer Aviation Regiment stationed in England, 43 Negro soldiers were awarded the Good Conduct Ribbons by Lieutenant Colonel Houghton R. Hallock of Berkeley, Cal., commanding officer of the regiment.

For many of them it was the first anniversary of their arrival in England. The men are members of a battalion commanded by Major Eugene L. Miller, of Tulsa, Okla.

Col. Hallock complimented the troops on their performance. They have helped construct two giant airdromes, have done repair work on others and have had the job of maintaining numerous Army Air Force installations.

Among those receiving ribbons were the following: Sergeant Russell D. Weaver, Circleville Route 2, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Weaver, and Corporal Leonard Newman, son of Mrs. Ora Jefferson, of Chillicothe.

Technical Sergeant Richard W. Harman, top turret gunner on the Flying Fortress, "Troublemaker," has been awarded the third Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal. The presentation was made by his group commander, Colonel Hunter Harris, Jr., at an Eighth AAF Base in England. Sgt. Harman, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. D. Harman, 160 West Mound street, was a student at the University of Pittsburgh Law School, prior to entering the AAF in September, 1942. He received his B. A. from the University of Pittsburgh in 1941. The citation read, "For exceptionally meritorious achievement, while participating in five separate bomber combat missions over enemy occupied Continental Europe. The courage, coolness and skill displayed by Sgt. Harman upon these occasions reflect great credit upon himself and the Armed Forces of the United States."

Flight Officer Edwin E. Swayer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert E. Swayer of Ashville and husband of Mrs. Ruth E. Sawyer of Lockbourne, has reported to the AAF Redistribution Station No. 1, at Atlantic City, N. J., after a visit with his parents and wife. He recently returned after considerable service overseas in the Italian war zone.

While overseas, F. O. Swayer engaged in 54 combat missions, and wears the Air Medal. He will be examined and interviewed while at the Redistribution Station to determine where his overseas experience can best be utilized by the Army Air Forces.

Among those graduating from an intensive course of Gunner's Mate training at recent Service School exercises at Great Lakes, Ill., was Ellis Eugene Cline, 18, son of Mrs. Florence Cline, of Ashville. He has been enjoying a leave with his mother and family.

Private Charles Huffer of Darbyville was among a contingent of wounded overseas veterans who were returned from the Italian War Front and were brought in a hospital train from Stark General hospital, Charleston, S. C., to the Army's Crile General hospital at Cleveland June 1. There were seven Ohioans in the group of 27 patients, most of whom were walking cases.

Private Arthur M. Wilkin, ASN 35226389 who is now in England, has as his address: Pvt. Arthur M. Wilkin 1908 Ord., A. M. Co. (A.V.N.), APO 635, c/o New York City, N. Y. His wife, Mrs. Helen Wilkin, is living at 151 East High street.

J. T. NEAL FUNERAL

Funeral services were held Thursday in the Spring Bank church, Fairfield county for John T. Neal, 76, retired farmer who died Tuesday at his home near Andersonville.

He is survived by a widow who was Miss Nettie Cowens; a son, Vernon R. of Amanda; two sisters, Mrs. Florence Haskins of Damos, Ark., and Mrs. Edna Richart, Lancaster; two brothers, Floyd and Elmer of this city and two grandchildren.

Burial was made in Spring Bank cemetery.

masculine removal of hats in elevators the Hotel Governor Clinton posted a sign, saying: "Though some of us are very slim, a few of us are fat. Since space is small, please don't remove your hat."

ASHVILLE

Nolan E. Murphy, formerly the Ashville commercial teacher and now employed in a similar capacity at Westerville, was a business visitor in Ashville Friday.

Mrs. Shirley Cooper, who underwent a tonsillectomy Monday at Grant hospital, returned home Friday. Mrs. Cooper expects to enter Ohio State university Monday for some advanced mathematical training.

Charles W. Nicholson is visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hess of near Canal Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifton E. Mahaffey left Thursday for an extended visit with their son-in-law and daughter, Lt. and Mrs. W. D. Snyder. Mr. Mahaffey has withdrawn his application for the superintendency of the Ashville schools because of his health.

Mr. and Mrs. Shadel Saunders were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Pettibone Thursday. Mr. Saunders, who formerly coached at New Holland, is basketball coach at Central high school in Columbus.

James Woodworth has returned home from a visit with his grandparents at Wapontka.

Miss Flora Peters returned to Centerville Thursday after spending a few days visiting her brother, Horace Peters and Mrs. Laura Courtright.

Among local young people who have recently secured employment are Miss Ada Lou Beckett, who is a bookkeeper at the Goodman Shoe Co., in Columbus, Miss Norma Jean Hines who is working at the Greyhound Bus Station in Columbus, and Miss Virginia McDowell who is employed at the Lockbourne Air Base.

The Girl Scouts met for the second time Wednesday. Several girls are already enrolled.

Orlan Hines' band is planning to sponsor a public dance at the Community Park on Friday, June 16.

Members of the local Boards of Education report that they have been swamped with applicants and applications for the vacancy

GRANTS

Help Your Country Your Saleslady and Yourself

Grant's policy has always been, "Satisfaction Guaranteed" and "Save at Grant's."

Today, as never before, these two slogans are more than mere phrases. In what better way can we guarantee you satisfaction than through your purchase of War Bonds from us?

As for the phrase, "Save at Grant's," in what better way can you save than through the purchase of War Bonds? Buy a War Bond from a Grant saleslady and help yourself to the World's Best Investment, and your Grant saleslady to win a prize and serve your country, your interest and her's.
